MORE VIOLENCE IS THREATENED IN MINNEAPOLIS

Ultimatum Is Issued by Employers.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Minneapolis, Minn., July 22.—[Special.]—Labor violence in the truck strike is anticipated here tomorrow. Employers have issued a flat ultimatum telling their drivers to return to work in the morning. If they refuse strikebreakers may take the drivers' seats, and if they do rioters are expected to interfere with trafic movements. A repetition of Friday's bloody battle may follow.

Late tonight Mayor A. G. Bainbridge announced that police escorts would convoy truck movements tomorrow. This was taken to mean that employers intended resumption of shipments. The mayor emphasized the right of lawful business movement, but apparently he feels that there will be trouble, for he warned citizens to remain away from the market district, where any violence is likely to occur.

Since the first riot began in May three persons have died. The last to die was Henry B. Ness, a trucker shot Friday, when rioters interfered with a shipment of goods from a store near the center of the business district. Two policemen, two innocent bystanders, and 46 others were wounded. Several are still in bad shape.

Begin Conferences Today.

Federal conciliators will begin conferences with employers early tomorrow. They are understood to be ready to propose a plan for settlement of difficulties which would involve increasing the union's membership by including inside workers in twenty-two commission firms in the market district. The drivers wish to represent celery trimmers, chicken pickers, elevator operators, radish cleaners, and other workmen in the firms in their ranks. Such an organization of industrial workers would not be dissimilar to the old time I. W. W. plan for "vertical" unions.

Here, as in San Francisco, those who suffer from the stultifying effects of violence look for and find evidences of communism. Civic organizations which are attempting to bring order and peace have encountered the unmistakable signs of subversive propaganda, representatives said today, and that promises to be the hardest situation to deal with.

Typical of this sentiment was the expression of Edwin Lindell, executive secretary of the Minnesota Law and Order league.

Report Communists Control.

"Our only interest in the situation," he said, "arises from the fact that charges have been made that communists have seized control of labor organizations for the purpose of overthrowing our government and the present form of society.

"We have concluded investigations which disclosed communistic connections of some of the riot leaders whose records indicate clearly that their purpose is to acquire political control through violence.

"Inasmuch as the Law and Order league stands for the preservation of our present form of government, with such changes as conditions appear to require brought about through legal, peaceful means, we are, of course, opposed to communism."

Skoglund Among Leaders.

Mr. Lindell did not "name names," but among the several leaders in the union believed to have been referred to is Carl Skoglund, one time correspondent for the Communist Daily Worker. Others who rule are Truckers Miles and Grant Dunne, who seem to share with William Brown the power to control the 4,000 men on the walkout.

Many regarded it as significant that none of those mentioned was wounded in Friday's rioting. If they were present it was presumed that they were well out of range of the police fire.

Brown, president of the union, is the firebrand behind his followers. He rules with an iron hand, as was demonstrated on July 6, when the union voted to walk out until they were given the right to represent inside workers in collective bargaining.

Report on Meeting.

Reports of that meeting run something like this:

BROWN—I'm going to present a resolution [calling for the strike], but really it isn't a resolution; it's a revolution. Before I read it, I don't want anybody sitting down when I call for a vote.

He read the resolution, then com-

14 ARE KILLED IN BUS CRASH; 23 OTHERS HURT

Victims Are Burned; 8 Missing.

Ossining, N. Y., July 22.—[Special.]—A spectacular bus crash here this afternoon claimed at least 14 lives. Eight persons are missing. Twenty-three were injured. The bus, speeding out of control, containing men, women, and children, plunged off a ramp over the New York Central tracks 35 feet down into a lumber yard. The gasoline tank exploded and many of the victims were burned in the wreckage. Lumber caught fire and the yard virtually was destroyed.

The bus was one of eight that had been chartered to take members of the Young Men's Democratic league of the 20th Assembly district, Brooklyn, to a baseball game at Sing Sing prison. The passengers included a party of political workers, their wives and children, and relatives.

Driver Among Dead.

Only five of the dead had been identified late tonight. They were Mr. and Mrs. A. Geller, Mrs. William Hayes, John McNicholas Jr., all of Brooklyn, and Frank Incarnoto, the driver of the bus. Three of the missing included two children, three men, and three women.

Surviving passengers reported that the brakes of the truck were defective and that the driver had trouble along the way from Brooklyn. He lost control of the heavy vehicle while running down the ramp, they reported, and was unable to negotiate a turn and the bus plunged through the railing.

Four men who escaped from the bus with their clothing aflame ran to the nearby Hudson river and leaped into the stream. They were reported rescued by members of the Ossining Yacht club. Two others raced down the railway track, and, while not definitely accounted for, are believed to be among the injured in hospitals.

Flames Envelop Wreckage.

The bus landed on its four wheels. An instant after the impact there was a terrific explosion and sheets of flame quickly enveloped the wreckage, immediately spreading to the nearby lumber piles. In a moment the fire was raging so fiercely that firemen, policemen, and other rescuers were unable to approach the spot.

Some of the passengers scrambled to safety with only slight injuries, but others were trapped and died in the flames. Virtually all of the bodies were burned beyond recognition, which made the task of identification slow. No lists of the passengers in the buses were available, and this further hampered the work.

Some Leap Free.

Some who leaped free of the wreckage sought to liberate others who screamed for help, but the flames soon drove them back. Then the roof of the bus caved in, and all those remaining in the wreckage were finally trapped.

The buses were chartered from the Rialto Bus company. No statement was forthcoming from the company tonight.

Assemblyman George J. Braun, who drove to Ossining in his own car, declared: "We certainly expect to take action against the bus company for this."

The eight buses that made the trip left the League headquarters in Brooklyn about 10 a. m. Accompanying the buses were a number of private cars. The whole caravan moved off in line, occupants of buses and cars singing and exchanging greetings.

Fails to Negotiate Turn.

On reaching Ossining the leading bus, in which were officials of the league, halted in Secor avenue, where the buses were to turn off for the prison. When the bus that crashed approached signals to stop were ignored, and it went careening down the hill at a mad pace, failed to negotiate a turn and crashed.

RESCUE PARTY CAN'T FIND TRAIL TO BYRD'S HUT

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, July 22.—(AP)—[Via Mackay radio.]—Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, commanding a tractor party of four which left Friday and an attempt to reach Admiral Byrd at Bolling, advanced weather base, reported today they had fought their way to 50 mile depot and were no longer able to pick up the flag marked trail leading south.

The expedition was to pick up Admiral Byrd at his isolated post 123 miles south, where he has been alone for four months, and bring him back to Little America. The party has reached the rim of the valley of crevasses, the most treacherous area of the route.

Dr. Poulter reported in radio contacts that all along the trail the small orange flags were difficult to find in places. They were completely snowed under in some instances and had only a few inches showing in others. Since 2:30 p. m. Friday, when the tractor left Little America, the machine zigzagged 130 miles to make 50. The crew scouted ahead on skis trying to pick up the trail. Dr. Poulter meanwhile was sweeping the trail with a searchlight. At 1:30 a. m. today the crew had been out 34 hours and the men had gone sleepless since 5:30 a. m. Friday. The temperatures encountered were bitter. Today the mercury at Little America dropped to 71 degrees below zero, the coldest yet registered here.

THREE CHICAGO CHILDREN HURT IN BOAT BLAST

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 22.—[Special.]—Three Chicago children were badly burned late today at Saugatuck, Mich., when the 30 foot motor boat Kemah, owned by W. J. Springer, member of the Chicago Board of Trade, exploded and burned.

The injured were: Shirley Springer, 10; Billy Springer, 8; Bob Flannery, 8, son of Robert Flannery of Chicago, and Jane Tharpe, 9, daughter of Edgar Tharpe of Saugatuck. Mr. and Mrs. Springer and Mr. Flannery jumped into the water and were unhurt. The Springer children's governess also was thrown into the water by the blast, but was not badly hurt.

Billy Springer was the most seriously hurt, and was unconscious when taken from the water several minutes later.

The cause of the accident has not been determined.

Forest Fire Perils Stettin, Germany; Vacate Hospital

STETTIN, Germany, July 22.—(AP)—A high wind swept a forest fire toward this city tonight, causing evacuation of a hospital on the outskirts. Flames already had destroyed 12,500 acres of woodland near here. Inmates

Heat Routed Along Lake; Inland Bakes

If there be any Chicagoans with lingering doubts of the efficacy of Lake Michigan as a cooling agent, yesterday's temperature record taken by the weather bureau should be convincing.

Under a broiling sun the mercury crept up to an official 101.3 degrees at the University of Chicago observatory at 11:30 a. m. Then the winds from the lake, coming in from the northeast, exercised their power and at noon the reading was 92. At 1 p. m. it was 88, at 2 p. m. it was 90, and at 3 p. m. again 92. Thereafter the wind strengthened and the afternoon readings were in the comfortable 80s.

New All-Time Heat Record.

"The 11:30 reading," said Forecaster C. A. Donnel, "was less than two degrees from the all time heat record set here in 1901. I am convinced that if the winds had not come off the lake a new high of at least 105 degrees would have been established in the afternoon."

Today's forecast is for hot weather—the rest of the middle west and the plains states continued to suffer under plus 100 temperatures yesterday—except along the lake.

Hot Spots of the Nation.

Three champion hot spots of the country yesterday were Huron, S. D.; Keokuk, Ia., and Cincinnati, O., each registering 108.

A total of twenty-eight American cities, out of ninety reporting to the weather bureau, had maxima of 100 or more.

Chicago's suburbs beyond the influence of the lake winds had high temperatures. Aurora's 107 was the highest of the year. Joliet and Elgin also sweltered in 107, while Willow Springs had to endure 109. The top of the municipal airport, some miles from the lake, was 104. At the World's Fair the maximum for the day was 98.

Nation's Toll 256.

The Associated Press tabulated 256 deaths from the heat in 21 states during the hot spell. Missouri reported the most, a total of 70 fatalities due wholly or in part to the heat.

Five deaths in Chicago were attributed to heat prostrations. The victims were Anthony Bieller, 3½ years old, 4242 West Harrison street; John O'Connell, 29, of 1414 West 81st street; Adolph Blank, 46, of 6108 West 59th street; Joseph Pastersky, 54, of 3222 West 23d street, and Ralph Wilson, 6 months, 4642 Evans avenue. In eleven other deaths the heat was listed as a contributing factor.

FATHER COLLAPSES WHEN TOLD OF DEATH OF DESPERADO SON

Mooresville, Ind., July 22.—[Special.]—John W. Dillinger Sr. collapsed here tonight when told that his outlaw son had been slain by federal agents in Chicago.

"Is it really true?" he asked in a bewildered fashion. "Are you sure there is no mistake?"

The elder Dillinger met reporters at the front door of his small farm on the outskirts of town. He was barefooted and clad in overalls. He had been ill from intense heat and collapsed feebly into a chair when he was told.

"Well, John is dead," he said. "At last it has happened—the thing I have prayed and prayed would not happen. I want the body brought back here. I'm so sick I can hardly talk."

Doris, 14 years old, and Frances, 10, half sisters of the outlaw, were asleep in the farmhouse, tired from a day of doing the farm's chores because of the illness of their father. They were not to be told until morning.

Friends of the Dillinger family in Mooresville were planning to send a physician to the home to care for the elderly man.

SLAIN BY U. S. AGENTS AS HE LEAVES THEATER

2 Women Wounded as Outlaw Falls on Lincoln Ave.

Pictures of Dillinger and the death scene comprise the back page of this issue.

John Dillinger, America's public enemy No. 1 and the most notorious criminal of recent times, was shot and killed at 10:40 o'clock last night by federal agents a few seconds after he had left the Biograph theater at 2433 Lincoln avenue.

Two bullets penetrated the chest and another the neck of the desperate outlaw. He died as he was being taken to the Alexian Brothers' hospital. The body was later removed to the county morgue, where the identification of Dillinger was made positive by finger prints despite the fact that he had blurred his finger tips with acid.

Dies as He Draws Gun.

According to Melvin H. Purvis, chief of the investigating forces of the department of justice in Chicago, and leader of the band of sixteen men who had waited for more than two hours while the desperado viewed his last picture show, Dillinger attempted to put up a fight.

"He saw me give a signal to my men to close in," said Purvis. "He became alarmed, reached into a belt and was drawing the .38 caliber pistol he carried concealed when two of the agents let him have it. Dillinger was lying prone before he was able to get the gun out and I took it from him."

Surgery on His Face.

Dillinger had taken great precautions to prevent himself being recognized. His face had been lifted and a scar, one of his most prominent identifying marks, removed by a surgical process. His once reddish brown hair had been dyed black and he had cultivated a small, carefully trimmed mustache, also jet black.

"It was a good job the surgeon did," said Purvis, "but I knew him the minute I saw him. You couldn't miss if you had studied that face as much as I have."

Mr. Purvis later said his men brought him a set of finger prints taken from the body and from them he was able to establish the identity of the slain man without any doubt. He said the acid treated finger tips had not proved effective, the impressions remaining and the whorls being distinguishable, and his men had no difficulty in the comparison.

Two Women Wounded.

Two women, passersby who had no connection with the outlaw, were wounded by stray bullets fired at him. They are Mrs. Etta Natalsky, 45 years old, 2431 Lincoln avenue, struck in the left leg, and Miss Theresa Paulus, 27 years old, 2920 Commonwealth avenue, whose left side was grazed. Their wounds, it was learned, were not serious.

Purvis and ten of his own men, accompanied by Capt. Timothy O'Neill and four members of the East Chicago police force, went to the vicinity of the theater at about 8:30 p. m. They had received information during the aft-

STORY OF PURVIS, LEADER IN LONG DESPERADO HUNT

"I'm glad it's all over."

Thus Melvin H. Purvis, youthful, soft spoken chief of the department of justice agents in Chicago, early today described his reaction to the successful end of the hunt for John Dillinger.

For four and a half months he had devoted most of his waking hours to the task of running down the noted outlaw, and until last night with more bad luck than good. So notorious was Dillinger, and so impatient were critics of Purvis' work, that there had been direct suggestions to Washington that he be removed and a more experienced man placed in charge of the search.

A Story of Disappointments.

It was to his unremitting work, more than anything else, that the final erasure of Dillinger is credited. He followed every clew that came in. Several times he was close on the trail, but, apparently through the quarry's luck, he and his men failed to catch up with the outlaw.

Away back in April federal agents thought they had Dillinger surrounded in a café at State street and Austin avenue. They arrested the fugitive's sweetheart, Evelyn Frechette. Dillinger, if he was present, got away.

Later Purvis heard that Dillinger and members of his gang were hiding in the north woods near Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. He used airplanes in an endeavor to catch up with the desperado, but was a little late. Following the trail down into Wisconsin, Purvis again failed to catch Dillinger at the Little Bohemia lodge. Dillinger fought his way out of a well-set trap.

Gets the Final Clew.

Purvis merely gritted his teeth, intensified his watchfulness and kept working, confident that Dillinger eventually would make a mistake or that some of his acquaintances would be tempted by the rewards offered and give him away.

"Dillinger had been in town about three days this time," he declared last night shortly after the killing. "I felt that the clue I got early last evening to the effect that he would attend the picture show depicting the life of a man that ended in the electric chair would be a good one.

"I recognized Dillinger as soon as he appeared near the theater. He looked at me when he came out, but I am sure he did not have any idea I was one of the searchers. Of course we are glad to have him out of the way."

Purvis is far from the detective type in appearance. He is slight of build and looks more the professional man he is than the popular conception of a sleuth. He has brown hair and eyes and a slow southern drawl.

Born in South Carolina.

He was born thirty years ago in Timmonsville, S. C. He was graduated in law from the University of South Carolina and admitted to the bar. More than seven years ago he became connected with the department of justice as investigator. On Dec. 17, 1932, he came to Chicago to head the agents here. He had previously held a similar position in Birmingham, Ala. He is unmarried.

One of the most important of his works, previous to last night, was his help in rounding up the Touhy gangsters who kidnaped John Factor. Information gathered by his agents formed the basis for the successful prosecution of the abductors. He also found and, with the aid of the Chicago police, captured Verne Sankey, another kidnaper who later committed suicide.

TUCSON CAPTORS OF DILLINGER VIEW HIS BODY

Chief of Police Dallas Ford and Capt. J. Smith of Tucson, Ariz., gladly left the World's Fair, late last night when they heard the news that John Dillinger had been slain. To satisfy themselves the Arizona officers visited the county morgue, viewed the desperado's body and said: "He can't get away this time." Chief Ford and Capt. Smith were interested in the end of Dillinger, for on Jan. 25 they personally had captured Dillinger in their home town. Later he escaped jail at Crown Point.

ernoon that the most noted of American outlaws would attend the performance of "Manhattan Melodrama," a gang and gun movie featuring Clark Gable and William Powell, during the evening.

The sixteen men posted themselves strategically, some at all possible exits of the theater, with groups to the north and south and one detail on the opposite side of busy Lincoln avenue. Samuel P. Cowley, Mr. Purvis' first assistant, had charge of placing the men. Purvis, seating himself in his automobile at the curb a few feet south of the showhouse, watched.

It was approximately 8:30 when Dillinger walked up to the entrance and purchased a ticket or tickets. [It has not been determined how many; Chicago policemen who happened to be at the scene, said he was accompanied by two women, one dressed in red, but Purvis said he saw none.] Passing into the theater, Dillinger took a seat.

While he was inside the agents completed their preparations for his emergence. There were so many of them, and their actions seemed, to the theater managr and to observers in the neighborhood, to be so suspicious that the Sheffield avenue police were notified. Policemen Frank Slattery, Edward Meisterheime and Michael Garrity, who investigated, were shown federal badges by the watchers.

Wait Over Two Hours.

The outlaw remained in the theater for two hours and four minutes. During this time Purvis several times went in and walked through the ailes, but was unable to locate his man in the darkness.

When Dillinger at length came out he appeared completely at ease. He wore a straw hat, a white silk shirt, a gray tie flecked with black, white canvas shoes and gray trousers of a summer type cloth. He had on no coat and the agents erroneously assumed that he carried no pistol.

"I was standing in the entrance of the Goetz Country club, a tavern just south of the theater," said Purvis, "when he walked by. He gave me a piercing look. Just after he went by and was midway of the next building, a National Tea company store, I raised my hand and gave the prearranged signal.

Men Close In.

"Dillinger went on, perhaps another dozen feet, and stepped down a curb to the mouth of an alley. My men, at least five or six, were closing in on him. I had thought it impossible he could have a weapon concealed and the plan was to seize him, pinion his arms and make him a prisoner. However, the men were instructed to take no chances.

"Becoming suspicious, Dillinger whirled around toward the men closing in. He was facing, I believe, toward the dark alley when he reached for his pistol. And that was when the shots that killed him were fired. Four altogether were fired. Three took effect.

Instantly there was a great commotion. The injured women screamed. George Gordon, son-in-law of Mrs. Natalsky and owner of the Goetz tavern, hearing that she was injured, ran out to the alley. Seeing the man lying wounded in the alley, he cried:

"I think that's my brother-in-law."

The agents, roughly pushing him back, told him to be quiet and not to interfere. The victim, they assured him, was not his brother-in-law.

Purvis leaned over the dying outlaw, looked at a gold ring which Dillinger was known to wear as a luck piece at all times, took his pistol, and ordered that he be taken to the nearest hospital.

There was a quick run to the Alexian Brothers' hospital, but the institution would not admit Dillinger as a patient. There was a very good reason for this. He was dead. The body was laid carefully on the grass in front of the hospital, while four of the agents stood guard over it until the arrival of a deputy coroner. This official gave permission for the removal of the body to the county morgue.

Names of Agents Withheld.

Purvis declined to give out the names of the men who had fired on the notorious outlaw, nor would he elaborate on the manner in which the information leading to the killing had been obtained.

"There were two or three men who fired," he declared. "I was not one of them. But they were federal agents."

The East Chicago police squad which helped to finish Dillinger, headed by Capt. O'Neil, was composed of Sergts. Walter Conroy, Martin Zarkovich, and Glenn Stretch and Detective Joseph Sopsic.

Capt. O'Neil took part in the fight in front of the First National Bank of East Chicago on Jan. 14 when Dillinger and his lieutenant, John Hamilton, escaped with $20,000 loot after fatally wounding Sergt. William P. O'Malley.

Great Crowd Gathers.

Some of the observers of the drama declared that the girl in red, who dropped behind Dillinger as he emerged from the theater, raised her hand with a handkerchief in it. It was the opinion of these observers that the girl in red was the "finger" and was cooperating with the agents. At any rate, she disappeared after the shooting and there was no clew to her identity.

Within a few minutes a great throng had gathered about the mouth of the alley. The word had gone forth that John Dillinger, a character known to all as the most determined and wary killer on the continent, had paid his last debt to society. Also hastening to the scene, and seeking information, were dozens of squads of Chicago policemen, who had been kept in the dark about the presence of Dillinger in the city.

Dillinger, according to Purvis, had been in Chicago only a few days. The leader of the federal agents explained that the presence of the East Chicago policemen at the scene was due partly to coincidence.

Narrow Escape for Policeman.

Policemen Slattery and Meisterheim, who were in civilian clothing, were near the scene of the shooting when it occurred. According to Slattery, one of the agents told him after it was over that he was among the luckiest of men.

"When we got the signal you were close to Dillinger," said the agent. "You looked like Dillinger and I was about to shoot you when the other fellows let loose and killed the right man."

Mr. Purvis said the rewards offered for Dillinger's capture or death amounted to $15,000 and will be paid to a person whose name he would not reveal and who, he said, gave him the information that led to the slaying. The government had offered $10,000 and the states of Indiana and Minnesota are to pay $5,000, he said.

The inquest into Dillinger's death will be held at the county morgue at 11:30 this morning. It will probably be conducted by Coroner Frank J. Walsh, assisted by Deputy Jacob Schewel.

3 Die, 2 Hurt as Canadian Army Flyer's Home Burns

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., July 22.—(AP)—Three persons were trapped in bed and burned to death early today when flames of unknown origin destroyed a bungalow housing the family of Sergt. John R. Sherwood of the Royal Canadian Air force. Sherwood and his wife are in a hospital and the woman's condition was said to be critical. The dead are Evelyn Massey, 19, Toronto; Denys Sherwood, 8; Gordon Sherwood, 6. Officials declined to disclose details pending a report to Ottawa. Sherwood, who was awakened by smoke, roused his wife and rushed out to give an alarm. Hearing his wife scream he ran back.

DILLINGER FINE CHAP, SAYS MARY KINDER, HARRY PIERPONT'S GIRL

Indianapolis, Ind., July 23.—[Special.]—Mary Kinder, slender, personable sweetheart of Harry Pierpont, saw and talked with John Dillinger "quite recently."

She admitted that tonight as she sat at the wheel of a small sedan just outside the door of the Green Lantern, a resort near Indianapolis. But that was just about all that she would admit, for the girl whom Harry Pierpont loved and tried to marry just before he was sentenced to "burn" in the Ohio state penitentiary for the murder of Sherif Jess L. Sarber, is a master of the art of evasion. Her attractive features are schooled and she has so mastered the art of concealing her emotions that any poker player would be envious.

"Was he wounded when you saw him?" the reporter asked.

"They all know he was wounded in St. Paul," she replied.

"Where did you see him? Here or elsewhere?"

"I'd rather not say," she answered, with a faint smile.

"They might accuse me of harboring him. Every other girl with whom he has been associated is 'in.' I'm the only one who is 'out'."

"Have you anything else to say concerning your interview with Dillinger?" the reporter asked, desperate at the noncommittal answers to his questions.

"You can't expect a girl to be prepared to say very much," she said, "when you have told her that one of her best friends has just been killed. There never was a finer fellow."

She turned to the reporter and looked at him suspiciously.

"Is it true? Is he dead?" she demanded.

DILLINGER DEATH BRINGS ELATION TO CUMMINGS

Chicago Agents' Work Wins Praise.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—(AP)—Smiling in elation, Attorney General Cummings tonight termed the slaying of John Dillinger by federal agents as "gratifying as well as reassuring."

The attorney general was notified just before he boarded the train for the west, the first leg of a journey to Hawaii. At the Union station here he dictated the following statement to reporters:

"The search for Dillinger has never been relaxed for a moment. He has escaped capture on several occasions by the narrowest of margins."

Cummings said the end of the Indiana bandit reflected great credit on the Chicago office of the division of investigation.

Continue Hunt for Pals.

Chiefs of the justice department, almost shouting their gratification over the death of Dillinger, asserted that the manhunt would continue until all Dillinger assistants had been run down.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau of investigation, rushing to his office at word the desperado had been slain, told reporters:

"This does not mean the end of the Dillinger case. Anyone who ever gave any of the Dillinger mob any aid, comfort, or assistance will be vigorously prosecuted."

He referred to George "Baby Face" Nelson, and Homer Van Meter. Nelson, named as the killer of Special Agent W. Carter Baum in the Dillinger battle in the Wisconsin woods last April, was described by Hoover as a "rat."

Fixed First Reward.

It was Attorney General Cummings who fixed the first federal reward for the outlaw—$5,000 for information leading to his arrest and $10,000 for his capture.

There was no stipulation that the captor must catch Dillinger alive to be eligible for the reward. It was noted, however, that department of justice officials cannot qualify for the bonus.

A reward of $5,000 also has been set by the attorney general for the capture of Nelson and $2,500 for information leading to his arrest.

Appropriation by congress of $25,000 for reward money—from which the Dillinger and Nelson rewards came—was but one of the actions taken by the national legislature to stem the tide of crime.

Cummings, asked by reporters if he considered Dillinger's death the greatest victory in the federal crime war, replied that to his mind this was "only an incident." He added that justice department agents were achieving notable victories in other parts of the campaign.

JOHN DILLINGER LEGEND BORN OF HIS DARING DEEDS

Audacity in Crime Seizes Public Imagination.

John Dillinger's notoriety grew out of his desperate deeds. It was supported by his personality.

No other criminal in American history ever so captured the imagination of the public. His insouciance, his cynical attitudes, his put-on good humor when bullets did not serve the immediate purpose he had in mind, were as much a part of the legend of this super-criminal as his uncanny ability to shoot his way out of traps or his unfaltering courage in battle.

Barely a year ago the name of Dillinger meant nothing outside the confines of Mooresville, Ind., his home town, and the walls of the Michigan City state prison. He was released from the prison on May 22, 1933, and went back to his father's farm, ostensibly to settle down to the quiet life of a rural worker.

Holds Up Three Banks.

Within three months he held up three banks, from which he took $40,000. On Sept. 25 he was captured and locked in the jail at Lima, O. Less than three weeks later he became a national figure in crime when three of his former companions in prison invaded the jail at Lima and rescued him from the law after shooting and killing Sherif Jess Sarber. Thereafter the Dillinger gang was the most notorious band of outlaws in America, probably in the world.

Millions of words were published about them as they went from one spectacular crime to another. The American citizens who had not seen Dillinger's picture were those who didn't read daily newspapers. The hunt for him finally found every investigator for the government and nearly all the local police forces of the country anxiously searching for him. The National Guard of his native state was called out to try to halt his—and his companions'—depredations.

Too Alert for Capture.

Yet for a long time John Dillinger was big enough to defy the law. In the admiring words of the underworld, he was a "good man," which meant not that his morals were regarded as of high grade but that he was too alert, too quick witted to be captured.

The underlying reason for his amazing criminality apparently was his treatment in court when he was captured after his first transgression. At the age of 20 he held up a grocery in his native town of Mooresville. He was recognized and captured. Pleading guilty, he was sentenced to serve ten to twenty-one years in the Michigan City prison. A companion, whose plea was not guilty, was sentenced to a mere two years.

Embittered at this trick of justice, the farmer boy brooded in his cell. The law had been harsh to him. He would be harsh toward the law and the law abiding when he got out. From September, 1924, to May 22, 1933, he stayed behind the walls and dreamed of his revenge.

Paroled, he laughed at the idea of farming. The three banks fell before him, one in Daleville, Ind., one in Montpelier, Ind., and the third in Indianapolis. Meanwhile he had not forgotten certain good friends in the prison at Michigan City. He arranged to smuggle weapons in to them.

Ten Men Break Jail.

These proved valuable. On Sept. 26 of last year, the day after Dillinger was thrust into jail at Lima, ten men broke from the prison. Among them were John Hamilton, Charles Makley, Harry Pierpont, and Russell Clark. All were desperate men, and Hamilton and Pierpont were cold blooded killers. They were good men too, but not as good as Dillinger.

Makley, Pierpont, and Clark were the trio who raided the Lima jail. Dillinger had gotten them out of their cells and they got him out. There was more than gratitude involved. The gang needed a chief, one with imagination enough to conceive profitable crimes and to lead in the commission of them. Pierpont and Makley have since been captured and sentenced to death for the Sarber murder, and Clark is serving a life sentence in prison for the killing.

On Oct. 14, just two days after Dillinger was freed, the gang raided the police station at Auburn, Ind., seizing machine guns and bulletproof vests. A week later a Greencastle, Ind., bank was robbed of $144,000.

Take Refuge in Chicago.

Taking refuge in Chicago, he and his friends rented a few flats and changed from one to the other as their necessities indicated. They spent their spare time practicing with firearms. Dillinger shot his way out of a police trap at Irving Park boulevard and Keeler avenue. Just as a sideline he and his band held up a bank at Racine, Wis., and obtained $28,000. Leaving the institution they took a bank official with them as a shield, tossing him from their car when the pursuit was distanced.

Hamilton killed a Chicago policeman. Then the outlaws rested a few weeks. On Jan. 15, passing through East Chicago, Ind., Dillinger suddenly decided that he and Hamilton should hold up the First National bank. They obtained $20,000 and slew Policeman William Patrick O'Malley. Again they used the favorite device of a bank official for a shield and got away.

Dillinger Is Captured.

Ten days later the police of Tucson, Ariz., quicker on the draw than their brethren in the east and favored by fortune, captured Dillinger, Clark, Makley and Pierpont with two women. The other three went to Indianapolis and later to Michigan City prison by train, but the notorious Dillinger was sent back to Crown Point in a plane. That is, he came as far as the Chicago airport by air. There a hundred Chicago policemen, armed and armored, took charge and drove with him to the Crown Point jail. The importance of the prisoner grew with this massing of guards. It was an impressive display of the law's majesty, and it sufficed to place him safely in Crown Point, there to await trial for the O'Malley murder.

Whittling out a little wooden gun, the popular Dillinger demonstrated on March 3 that stone walls do not a prison make, or anyhow not for long. He scared his jailers with the toy weapon and, accompanied by a Negro prisoner, Herbert Youngblood, drove away in the sherif's automobile, equipped with plenty of arms and ammunition.

Presumably he rejoined his companions in Chicago, obtained funds from them and again took up the business of dodging the police and robbing banks. So great was his notoriety that practically every bank robbery since his flight has been attributed in part to him. One bank in Michigan having been held up by five men, the employés were called in and all five were identified as Dillinger.

On March 31 the No. 1 desperado was trapped again in St. Paul, but shot his way out of a group of federal agents. He fled from a St. Paul apartment with Evelyn Frechette, his Indian girl friend, on April 3 or 4. He had been wounded in the brush with the agents, and Dr. Clayton May and Miss Frechette have since been convicted of harboring him. Both have been sentenced to the federal penitentiary.

Escapes Another Trap.

There have been thousands of rumors since concerning the outlaw's whereabouts. It has been definitly established that he visited the old home farm at Mooresville in early April, also that he was in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., about April 20. On April 22 he and several companions fought their way out of another trap at the Little Bohemia lodge near Mercer, Wis. A federal employé and an innocent bystander, a CWA worker, were killed in this battle.

On May 15 the department of justice paid a high compliment to the abilities of Dillinger. An offer of $10,000 for his capture, dead or alive, was made. Even Europe has heard of him. London papers have had their Dillinger scare. Scotland Yard prepared for him some weeks ago when it was reported he was en route to England on a cattle boat. Later, according to report, a widespread search was made for him in the vicinity of London.

Dillinger led a raid on the Merchants National bank of South Bend, Ind., June 30, in which a policeman was shot to death and four other persons were wounded. A policeman who took part in battling the robbers asserted that their leader was Dillinger, as did two other eyewitnesses. The loot was $29,890.

5 OF DILLINGER'S GANGSTERS ARE STILL AT LARGE

3 of Pals Slain, 8 Locked Up in Prison.

Despite the inroads on his gang membership during the last stages of his outlaw career, John Dillinger is believed to have commanded the services of five of the seventeen members of his desperate crew to the end.

Eight of his outlaws were caught and placed behind prison bars, and three were killed in conflict with authorities. Following are the members of the Dillinger band believed to be still at large:

JOHN HAMILTON, 41 years old, probably the most dangerous member of the gang. He is a frowning, chunky man, a former carpenter, who is known as a smooth talker and quick on the trigger. He is charged with killing of Policeman W. T. Shanley in a north side garage on Dec. 14, 1933.

Gang's Machine Gunner.

HOMER VAN METER, 26 years old, a former waiter whose mild blue eyes belie the fact that he is the gang's ace machine gunner. He accompanied Dillinger on most of his raids on banks and on police stations in quest of bullet proof vests and weapons.

GEORGE [BABY FACE] NELSON, 25 years old, another of the leading Dillinger gangsters. He has shot it out with authorities on several occasions and was named as the slayer of Federal Agent W. Carter Baum when the gang escaped a trap at Little Bohemia lodge, near Mercer, Wis., on April 22 of this year.

JOSEPH BURNS, 40, a bank bandit and murderer. He was known to be with Dillinger in Chicago after his escape with nine others from the Indiana state penitentiary, where he was serving a life sentence for murder.

JOSEPH FOX, 32, a bank bandit who escaped from the penitentiary at Michigan City, Ind., and joined the Dillinger gang.

Of the five, Hamilton, Van Meter, Burns, and Fox met Dillinger in the Indiana penitentiary and were among the ten whose liberation the gang leader engineered. They escaped on Sept. 26, 1933, allegedly with guns Dillinger had smuggled in to them.

Three of Gang Killed.

The three outlaws who met death in battles with the law:

HERBERT YOUNGBLOOD, Negro, who escaped with Dillinger in their "wooden gun" departure from the Crown Point jail on March 3, 1934. He was killed on March 17 at Port Huron, Mich., after he killed Undersherif Charles Cavanaugh.

EUGENE GREEN, who was with Dillinger when the gang fought its way out of a police trap in a St. Paul apartment on April 1. Three days later he was shot and fatally wounded by federal agents in St. Paul.

TOMMY CARROLL, who escaped with the gang from Little Bohemia, was slain by policemen in Waterloo, Ia., on June 7.

Eight Members in Prison.

The eight men who are now behind prison bars were captured in various parts of the country. They are:

HARRY PIERPONT, 40, a sleek college graduate and engineer who turned bandit. He is in the Ohio penitentiary awaiting execution for the murder of Sherif Jesse Sarber during the gang's delivery of Dillinger from the Lima, O., jail.

CHARLES MAKLEY, 50, a former railroad brakeman. He is also being held for execution for the murder of Sherif Sarber.

RUSSELL CLARK, 39, a sleepy eyed bank bandit, now serving a life sentence in the Ohio penitentiary for the killing of Sherif Sarber.

EDWARD SHOUSE, 27, who said he parted company with other members of the gang because they were kill crazy. He was captured at Paris, Ill., last Dec. 21 in a gun fight in which Indiana State Policeman Eugene Teague was killed. He was returned to the Michigan City penitentiary, from which he escaped, to finish serving a 25 year sentence for robbery.

Held for Robbery Trial.

HARRY COPELAND, a charter member of Dillinger's gang. He was captured in Chicago last Nov. 19 and is now being held at the Michigan City penitentiary for trial for participating with Dillinger in the robbery of a Greencastle, Ind., bank.

HILTON CROUCH, 31, a former dirt track automobile racer and one of Dillinger's earliest partners in crime. He was captured in Chicago last Dec. 23 and was sentenced to 20 years for the robbery, with Dillinger, of an Indianapolis bank.

WALTER DETRICK, 31, a bank bandit who escaped from the Michigan City prison. He was captured in Bellwood on Jan. 7 in a fight in which Theodore [Handsome Jack] Klutas, kidnaper, was slain by police and was returned to the Indiana prison to serve a life sentence for bank robbery.

LESLIE HOMER, 46, who joined the gang while on parole from the Indiana state prison and participated in the robbery of a bank in Racine, Wis. He is now serving a 28 year sentence at Waupun, Wis.

WITNESS TELLS HOW DILLINGER WENT TO DEATH

All Happened in Split Second, He Says.

Edgar l'Allemand, 1820 Berenice avenue, a mechanic in the Barth garage, 2424 Lincoln avenue, was one of those who actually witnessed the slaying of John Dillinger by federal agents.

"I was sitting in the garage eating my lunch," he related. "Because of the gasoline fumes I decided to step to the sidewalk for some fresh air.

Has Clear View.

"I glanced across the street as I stood there. Everything seemed calm and peaceful; there were not many people around and little trafic. I had a clear, unobstructed view of the sidewalk in front of the theater on the opposite side.

"Suddenly I saw a tall man fire two shots in quick succession. He seemed to be standing almost beside the man who was shot. The wounded man fell to the alley without uttering a sound.

"A woman nearby screamed and pulled at her dress as if she were wounded in the leg. But she did not fall. I instantly ran back into the garage for water. I knew some one was wounded, but I had no idea what had happened.

Keeps Crowd Back.

"When I returned across the street with the water, a man with a pistol was in charge. He waved the pistol and kept the crowd back. I did not know he was a government man and for that reason surmised it was a holdup or a gang killing.

"I went back across the street and telephoned for police, still under the impression it had been a holdup or gangster murder. Several police squads arrived, however, before the operator could connect me with the police.

"It all happened in a split second. I didn't notice whether any women were with Dillinger. I didn't see any close by when the two shots were fired."

Woman Tells of Slaying.

Mrs. Esther Gusinow, 2427 Lincoln avenue, said she was sitting in her parlor looking down on Lincoln street and had been viewing the front of the Biograph theater for an hour and a half.

She said she had noticed several young men standing there, as though waiting for their girl companions.

"Then I saw a young man walk out of the theater, accompanied by two girls," Mrs. Gusinow continued. "They were only about ten feet from the left of my window and I was looking right down at them when I saw three men walk up back of them.

"I heard two shots—there may have been more—and the man between the two girls fell to the sidewalk. I thought at first that it was a holdup and that the victim was killed. Then I thought of Dillinger, and because it appeared to me that the three men shot without giving a warning I thought immediately that the victim was Dillinger.

"I sent my brother-in-law running downstairs, and he called to me in a few seconds that the man who was shot had been carrying a gun.

"Dillinger fell face down. The men—I understand they are government agents—turned the body face up and stood looking at it for a few moments.

NUN HELPS POLICE HERE IN CAPTURE OF 2 CHURCH THIEVES

A quick witted nun effected the capture of two thieves who shortly before 11 o'clock mass yesterday invaded St. Dorothy's Roman Catholic church, 78th street and Vernon avenue, and stole purses from three women.

Police arrested Joseph Scott, 21 years old, 10156 South Morgan street, and Joseph Casey, 22, of 10107 South Morgan street. Both confessed, police said. They were captured after the nun, whose name was not learned, noted the license number of their car as they drove away from the church.

The victims were Mrs. Helen A. Latz, 7956 Vernon avenue, and Mrs. David Gibbons, 7940 Rhodes avenue, whose purse contained $58, and Mrs. Joseph C. Barber, 7941 Langley avenue, who lost $1.25. All had been seated in the middle aile, close to the front of the church.

CRUISER SINKS, INVENTOR AND 7 OTHERS RESCUED

Bayshore, N. Y., July 22.—(AP)—Coast guardsmen today rescued Charles Lanier Lawrance, inventor of the Wright whirlwind airplane motor, his wife and daughter, five other passengers, and two prize Labrador dogs after Lawrance's $30,000 power cruiser sank in Great South bay.

Besides Mr. and Mrs. Lawrance and Miss Emily Lawrance, 19, those saved were Joseph Frelinghuysen of Far Hills, N. J., son of former United States Senator Frederick Frelinghuysen; Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Horan, and Mr. and Mrs. William Wood of New York.

The 52 foot cruiser, the Meadow Lark, struck a submerged fishing stake and sank before a tender at her stern could be loosened.

3 PIRATES HOLD UP 7 ON SPEED BOAT IN LAKE

Three lake pirates took possession of a speedboat leaving the World's Fair early today, robbed six passengers and the pilot, marooned them on a government pier near the mouth of the river, and then sped away in the boat. The passengers lighted a flare to attract rescuers. Capt. John O. Anderson of the old Chicago coast guard station nearby, after rescuing the victims, immediately began an armed search of the lake for the pirates.

The victims included three women. Among those robbed were James Ramsey, 216 East 109th street, and Orville Schneider, 601 North Rockwell street, passengers, and Leo P. Coe, 10721 Forest avenue, captain of the boat. Police did not immediately learn the names of the other victims. All lost a total of $97. One of the women wore a costly diamond ring which the pirates were unable to remove.

The speedboat, the St. Louis, operated by the Gar Wood Transit company, had just left the dock near the east tower of the Sky Ride when the three bandtis, posing as passengers, drew guns. They searched each of their victims, completing the holdup while the craft was off Van Buren street. Then they ordered the boat driven to a government pier, put off their victims, and sped away.

DOCTOR CHANGES SHIPS IN MIDSEA TO SAVE OFFICER

PLYMOUTH, England, July 22.—(AP)—How an emergency call for a doctor in mid-Atlantic on July 14 was answered and saved the life of a ship's officer was revealed here today.

The chief engineer of the British steamer Maidenhead, from Norfolk, Va., became ill and needed immediate medical assistance.

The captain of the vessel wirelessed to the Dutch liner Venezuela. Dr. van der Sluyo, was transferred to the Maidenhead. After prescribing the doctor returned to the Venezuela.

TEAR GAS ENDS STRIKE IN BANK OF SPAIN VAULT

MADRID, July 22.—(AP)—A flood of tear gas in underground workings beneath the Bank of Spain today dislodged strikers who had refused to come from their subterranean stronghold.

Police officials descended into the workings, excavations being made for new vaults, and tried unsuccessfully to induce the workers to come out.

Then, after warnings, police tossed in several gas bombs. Eight workmen were overcome and carried out. The rest fled. Seven were arrested after a clash with guards at the entrance of a shaft.

CROWD STORMS MORGUE TO SEE OUTLAW'S BODY

Reveal Dillinger Seared Fingers in Acid.

"There he is!"

These words were whispered in awed tones early this morning by a young woman, not more than 19 years of age, as she, with a dozen other persons, pressed her face against a ground level meshed window of the county morgue. All were gazing in fascination upon a busy group in the center of a large basement room.

The curious crowd at the window was typical. At every available window and door crushed groups of men and women who hoped to get a glimpse of America's most notorious outlaw—dead. Inside the room were perhaps 100 men, doctors, hospital and morgue attachés, federal agents, police, and newspapermen. It finally became necessary, because of the crush, to order away all but those officially concerned with the formal duty of pronouncing John Dillinger dead.

Fastidious to the End.

It was plain that even as a fugitive Dillinger was somewhat fastidious sartorially. His gray trousers were clean and neatly pressed. His white oxfords were spotless, and his white shirt, touched with stripes of green, was of good texture.

Dillinger's pockets yielded a magazine clip, several bills and change amounting to a bit more than $7, two keys tied together with string, a fancy handkerchief, and an expensive Hamilton watch No. 558384, in the back of which was pasted a picture identified later as that of Evelyn Frechette, his part Indian sweetheart, who is now in a federal prison for having aided him to avoid capture in Wisconsin.

Examination of Dillinger's body by Dr. Charles D. Parker, of the county hospital staf, showed that he had been shot three times. The wounds were in the lower region of the heart and in the back of the neck. The two body wounds were not necessarily vital, surgeons said, but it was agreed that the neck wound alone would have caused death. One of the body wounds was almost at the apex of the heart, the other more to the side, on the same level, between the eighth and ninth ribs. There was also found the scar of an old bullet wound in the left knee, received perhaps in his St. Paul scrape with federal agents and police.

Face Lifting Is Futile.

On each side of the face, forward of the ears, were surgical incisions three or four months old, indicating that Dillinger had resorted futilely to face lifting in an effort to confound pursuers.

Examination of Dillinger's fingers showed that he had attempted another trick of criminal fugitives to outsmart pursuers. He had sought to burn away his telltale fingerprint by burning the tips with powerful acids, but all he succeeded in doing was to distort the deltas and corps.

NEW DEAL IN SPENDING TOLD BY THE TREASURY

U. S. Becomes Largest Banker in World.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—THE TRIBUNE presents in an accompanying table a detailed analysis, prepared by the treasury department of the appropriations, allotments, and expenditures of public funds to finance the Roosevelt recovery program and the New Deal.

Altogether more than 13 billion dollars have been appropriated and allotted. Of this amount 6½ billions had been expended up to the close of business on July 18, the date of the treasury compilation. The remaining 6½ billion is yet to be expended.

In addition the seventy-third congress authorized expenditures on recovery projects aggregating in the neighborhood of 10 billions, the actual appropriation of which is for congress to determine at the next session.

Sources for the Billions.

There are four main sources of recovery and New Deal funds which may be tabulated as follows:

Specific appropriations	$ 2,801,764,808
Natl. industrial recovery act	3,300,000,000
Emergency appropriation act of 1935	1,426,175,000
Reconstruction Finance corp.	5,970,127,601
Total	$13,109,123,924

In addition to the colossal resources with which the Reconstruction Finance corporation has been provided, it was authorized to provide funds without limit for three purposes: Purchase of preferred stock in commercial banks, payments to farmers by the secretary of agriculture, and financing the new housing program. In effect the RFC was given three blank checks on the treasury.

Critics Deny Adequate Results.

According to the administration viewpoint, the expenditure of 6½ billions has put us well on the way to recovery and the expenditure of the remaining 6½ billions will complete the job. Critics of the New Deal contend that the first 6½ billions have failed to prime the business pump and ask why it should be imagined that another 6½ billions would be any more effective than the first.

Through the RFC Uncle Sam has become the greatest banker in the world. Private financial institutions borrow chiefly from the RFC, banks and trust companies having obtained, on collateral, loans of $1,581,000,000, of which 60 per cent has been repaid. The RFC has thirty-two agencies in cities outside of Washington which examine all loan applications in their districts. Interest is now at four per cent, with maturity not to exceed three years.

Loans to Closed Banks.

In order to liquidate frozen assets of closed banks, the RFC, with its deposit liquidation division, has been making loans on 50 per cent of their value. Almost 500 million dollars has been advanced for such loans, of which 30 per cent has been paid back.

In order to help banks strengthen their capital structure before entering the federal deposit insurance corporation, and also to loosen credits for industry, the RFC buys capital notes, debentures, and preferred stocks and makes loans to banks on their preferred stock. The corporation requires banks, in such borrowings, to promise to pay their directors, management, and employés' salaries satisfactory to the RFC.

Loans Limit Pay.

Insurance companies and real estate mortgage companies may obtain long term loans from the RFC, secured by "sound assets"—real estate or apartment house bonds. Insurance companies borrowing on preferred stock may not pay any employé more than $17,500 a year, nor increase any salaries without the RFC's consent.

The latest machinery tendering government credit to industry is set up by the loans to industry bill, recently signed by the President. Two agencies—the federal reserve banks and the RFC—have been named to administer 580 million dollars in such loans.

With the approval of the interstate commerce commission the RFC makes loans to railroads. For this purpose it already has disbursed more than 400 million dollars. No advance may exceed 100 million dollars. The Public Works administration has been authorized to set aside 135 million dollars for loans to railroads, chiefly to buy equipment—steel rails, freight cars, locomotives, electrification.

PWA funds are available for low cost housing, slum clearance projects, and a wide variety of construction work. Private companies can get only loans, but public housing authorities and governmental subdivisions get 30 per cent of the cost of the project as a grant and 70 per cent as a loan.

In each of the twelve administrative districts of the Farm Credit Administration are four permanent credit institutions to make loans to farmers. These are a federal land bank, a federal intermediate credit bank, a production credit corporation, and a bank for coöperatives.

Primarily, the land banks, which are under the supervision of the land bank commissioner, do not make direct loans to the farmers. They advance funds to national farm associations on mortgages held by these institutions, and thereby release credit for the farmer. More than 85 per cent of the proceeds of loans made by the land banks have gone to refinance existing indebtedness. Half the remainder went for farm operating expenses.

Follow Farms' Seasonal Needs.

The federal intermediate credit banks are designed to supply credit with maturities adapted to the seasonal needs of agriculture. Two general types of loans are made, but not directly to the farmer. The banks may discount notes of farmers and stockmen which have been indorsed by production credit corporations, banks, or live stock loan companies. Or they may make loans, secured by paper eligible for discount, to such companies.

The primary purpose of these agencies is to supply capital and assist farmers in the district to organize production credit associations which lend directly to the farmer.

For the marketing season 1932-1933 there were 11,000 farmers' buying and selling associations (coöperatives) with 3,000,000 members, doing $1,340,000,000 business. The farm credit act of 1933 established a central bank for coöperatives at Washington and one bank for coöperatives in each land bank district to make credit available for these institutions. Loans are made for marketing of agricultural commodities and for construction and improvement of company property.

Lends Seeds to Farmers.

In addition to these credit facilities, the FCA maintains six crop production and seed loan offices. Small loans secured by crops or live stock may be obtained to buy feed and to assist in production.

Home owners may approach the government for loans through three divisions operating under the home loan board, established under President Hoover, the home loan banks, the Home Owners Loan corporation, and federal savings and loan associations.

Advances are made by the home loan banks to member institutions on the security of a first mortgage or other first lien on real estate on which is located a dwelling for not more than three families.

Big Demand for Loans.

The Home Owners' Loan corporation, unlike the home loan banks, which lend only to financial institutions, makes direct loans to home owners. About one out of every five home owners in the country has asked the government to refinance his mortgage, requests amounting to almost 5 billion dollars. The HOLC to date has taken up mortgages on 306,887 homes, giving its bonds in exchange to the sum of $923,416,733. The bonds mature in eighteen years, bear interest at 3 per cent, and are guaranteed by the government.

The federal savings and loan associations are local mutual thrift institutions chartered by the home loan bank board, in which persons may invest their funds. These funds, in turn, are to be used in financing new homes in the district in which such associations are located. All associations are members of the home loan bank system and require, as security on their loans, their shares or first mortgages on homes. Usually loans may not exceed $20,000. Many state chartered institutions are being converted into federal associations.

For Repairing of Houses.

The housing act sets up an elaborate system for repairing, building, and financing homes. A home owner who cannot afford necessary repairs on his home may go to the local bank or building and loan association with an estimate by a contractor of the amount he needs. If the bank considers him a good credit risk and the estimate as reasonable, it may take his note and make the loan to the contractor. The home owner repays in monthly instalments at 5 per cent over 5 years. The government guarantees 20 per cent of the loan, and this, of course, induces lending.

*The emergency expenditures included in this statement for the period prior to the fiscal year 1934 include only expenditures on account of the Reconstruction Finance corporation and subscriptions to capital stock of federal land banks under authority of the act of Jan. 23, 1932. Expenditures by the several departments and establishments for public works under the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932 were made from general disbursing accounts, and, therefore, are not susceptible to segregation from the general expenditures of such departments and establishments on the basis of the daily treasury statements.

†Includes $509,885,000 advanced by the secretary of the treasury under authority of sec. 12 [b] of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, which must be returned to the treasury from the proceeds of processing taxes collected on farm products.

‡There are no statutory limitations on the amounts of funds which may be made available by the Reconstruction Finance corporation for carrying out the purposes of sec. 5 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for the purchase by the Reconstruction Finance corporation of preferred stock or capital notes of banks and trust companies under the act of March 9, 1933. The Reconstruction Finance corporation is required to make available to the federal housing administrator such funds as he may deem necessary for the purposes of carrying out the provisions of the National Housing Act. The amounts to be included in this column for the purposes specified will be based upon checks issued therefor from time to time by the Reconstruction Finance corporation. The authority of the Reconstruction Finance corporation to issue its bonds, notes, and debentures has been increased by such amounts as may be required to provide funds for such purposes.

§Excess of credits, deduct.

¶Under the provisions of the Emergency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1935, the Reconstruction Finance corporation is authorized to purchase marketable securities acquired by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, but the amount which the Reconstruction Finance corporation may have invested at any one time in such securities may not exceed $250,000,000. Moneys paid for such securities are available for loans [but not grants] under title II. of the National Industrial Recovery Act. The amount of obligations which the Reconstruction Finance corporation is authorized to have outstanding at any one time is increased by the sums necessary for such purchases, not to exceed $250,000,000. The amount to be included in this column will represent the proceeds deposited with the treasurer of the United States on account of the sales of securities by the Public Works Administration to the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

‖Under sec. 3 of the act of June 16, 1934, the Reconstruction Finance corporation is authorized to purchase at par obligations of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation in a face amount of not to exceed $250,000,000, and the amount of obligations which the Reconstruction Finance corporation is authorized to have outstanding at any one time is increased by $250,000,000. The amount to be included in this column will represent the proceeds deposited with the treasurer of the United States on account of the sale of such obligations by the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation to the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

£The appropriation of $950,000,000 provided in the act of Feb. 15, 1934, was allocated by the President as follows: Civil Works Administration, $375,000,000; Federal Emergency Relief Administration, $575,000,000, of which latter amount $18,320,000 was transferred to the Federal Surplus Relief corporation for the purchase of commodities.

/This amount represents an allocation of funds by the President to the administrator of public works. As and when such funds are allocated by the administrator to specific projects, the amounts will be transferred from an unallocated status to an allocated status.

KOHLER CO. RIOTERS HOLD DEMONSTRATION; OWNER VISITS PLANT

Kohler, Wis., July 22.—(AP)—Former Gov. Walter J. Kohler today sought in person to bolster the morale of maintenance workers housed within the blockaded plumbing equipment plant of the Kohler Manufacturing company while outside the walls 2,500 rioters and sympathizers paraded in a demonstration.

The rioters chose this, the seventh day of their blockade, for a mass meeting to show their strength. Men, women and many children went to the riot lines, marched around the plant, cheered their speakers and waved banners from 2 until 6 p. m.

Meanwhile Mr. Kohler, president of the company, joined the workers who are living inside the plant while remaining at their posts. Certain jobs must be filled if the village shall continue to receive its water supply. Other workers must keep fires burning in the delicate pottery kilns to prevent huge losses.

The workers, in what company officials termed "enforced imprisonment," were treated to a chicken dinner. Religious services were conducted.

While the demonstrators marched and shouted, those within the walls engaged in horseshoe tournaments, baseball and card games and song fests.

Radios afforded amusement for some and others spent the hours writing to the "folks back home," some of whom live within shouting distance of the factory.

Bootleggers Quit First Time in Last 15 Years

Muscatine, Ia., July 22.—[Special.]—Muscatine bootleggers have stopped selling liquor for the first time in fifteen years. They temporarily retired following Thursday's state raid in Davenport in which 22 arrested for liquor sales face court action Tuesday.

H. C. HARNAMAN MADE TREASURER OF STATE G. O. P.

H. C. Harnaman was appointed treasurer of the Republican state central committee yesterday by State Chairman Justus L. Johnson. Mr. Harnaman lives at 123 Washington avenue, Danville, Ill., operates a 1,600 acre farm in Vermillion county and is nationally known as a dairyman and as a breeder of Belgian mares and Guernsey cattle which have won many prizes.

"Mr. Harnaman has always been a stanch Republican and I am sure that by taking an active part in the coming campaign he will give great strength to the party," said Chairman Johnson.

"He is a graduate of Iowa State college and later he went into the creamery business at Watseka. He established the Sugar Creek Creamery, which has since been merged."

The appointment signalized the beginning of the Republican organization to retrieve lost ground in the state and nation. Arrangements were under way for the state convention to be held in Springfield on Aug. 9, which will be addressed by Henry P. Fletcher, newly chosen chairman of the Republican national committee.

manded, "Now everybody in the hall stand up!" Everybody did.

In other remarks intended to electrify the meeting Brown told the truckers, it was said, that the "working people are the real taxpayers and we don't like to see our enemies—the police department—turned against us. But if they are . . . we've got enough people to get rid of them."

Encouraging the rioters at every turn have been bulletins issued under the name of Communist League of Minneapolis. The circulars call for a general strike. The Militant, another Red organ, explains with great candor that the communists deliberately chose the truckers' union as their tool in advancing their outlawed thought.

Admit They Are Communists.

Three of those wounded Friday admitted to police questioners that they were communists and not members of the union. Their adherents have filtered into the picket lines during all the labor difficulties here, it was said.

Another of Brown's pronouncements was: "Hereafter let's understand that it's not one union alone—it's all together. All out or all on the job!"

The goal seems to be a complete stoppage of all industry—as it was in San Francisco—but to date only the cab drivers have joined the truckers.

Merrill Hutchinson, president of the Minneapolis branch of the Law and Order league, emphasized today that the league is not aligned with either faction in the controversy. "We're interested only in the purposes of our organization—the maintenance of law and order," he said, "either by the employers or by the strikers. But we feel that people should be permitted to go about their daily tasks as they choose. To that extent, we run contrary to the strike."

4,000 Guardsmen Called Out.

Gov. Floyd Olson, who sent encouraging word to the drivers' union when they organized in April, has called out about 4,000 National Guardsmen—the largest concentration of troops in Minneapolis since war times. Some are in armories and others are stationed in the state fair grounds.

Peer, milk, ice, and newspaper trucks move without a great deal of difficulty, and most of the farmers bringing truck vegetables to the market are not molested. Aside from that, there is no passenger trafic save the street cars and private automobiles.

Laboring in the heat today were Father Francis J. Haas and E. H. Dunnigan, the federal labor conciliators, who are hoping that they can arrange a meeting of employers and strikers tomorrow or Tuesday. They made fair progress toward that end yesterday, but the sun blazed down upon the city and it was too hot to argue. The mediators meet with the employers tomorrow morning, and if their overtures are successful an "across the table" conference may be held later in the day.

Play Bridge All Night to Escape Kansas Heat

Topeka, Kas., July 22.—(AP)—Topeka may be one of the hottest cities in the country, but its residents don't let 110 degree weather interfere with their bridge.

The following item appeared in a Topeka newspaper today:

"The Little Women's Bridge club met with Mrs. Margaret Shultice yesterday from 4 o'clock until 9 a. m. for bridge and breakfast."

Longshoremen to Vote Today on Arbitration of Walkout

San Francisco, Cal., July 22.—(AP)—The end of the protracted Pacific coast longshoremen's strike was forecast today as the striking stevedores prepared for a secret ballot on whether to submit their differences to arbitration.

Ballots went out by airplane during the night to all ports of the western seaboard as the national longshoremen's board speeded plans for the voting which would place the 15,000 workers back on the job possibly by Wednesday.

Meantime, national guardsmen began moving away from the San Francisco waterfront, while from Los Angeles came the report of the shooting and wounding of a police officer by dockworkers.

Shipowners Make Concessions.

Longshoremen leaders consented to the vote last night after shipowners had consented to arbitrate and agreed at the same time to bargain collectively with other maritime unions.

Thus for the first time since the men walked out May 9 the strike, which virtually paralyzed coast shipping and led to widespread rioting and an unparalleled general walkout in the San Francisco bay region, seemed on the verge of actual settlement.

"I am satisfied it will carry. I believe the men are willing to go along with the government," said J. C. Bjorklund, Pacific coast secretary of the International Longshoremen's association, as the decision to ballot was reached.

From Harry Bridges, the militant Leftist leader of the stevedores here came the asserted admission, too, that "there is nothing left to do but submit to arbitration."

All points at issue, including wages, hours, working conditions, and the debated question of control of hiring agencies, will come up for settlement before President Roosevelt's longshoremen's board should the men accept arbitration. A majority vote of the entire membership will decide.

Balloting Begins Today.

Balloting will begin in all ports tomorrow. Plans for conduct of the voting were completed here today as Dr. Louis Bloch, secretary of the longshoremen's board, conferred with the four conciliators of the United States department of labor and assigned them to the various ports to represent the board.

The task of moving nearly 200,000 tons of freight that has accumulated on the docks or been in the holds of ships during the longshoremen's strike continued apace today.

Forty-five vessels, exclusive of coastwise craft, were berthed at piers, with another 26 anchored in the stream waiting to move up to the docks when unloading space becomes available.

In the San Francisco bay region there are 108 vessels in port.

Self-styled "vigilantes" raided five hangouts of radical elements in the San Francisco bay region during the night and police, following in their path, arrested four men for investigation.

The major raid was on the headquarters of the longshoremen's and water front operators in San Mateo. The raiders wrecked the interior of the place with axes.

Four private residences in Richmond were the other places entered by the citizens' groups.

PORTLAND AWAITS RESULT

Portland, Ore., July 22.—(AP)—Organized labor met here today to consider use of the general strike in sympathy with longshoremen and other cision of longshoremen leaders to vote on submitting all disputed matters to arbitration, the fear a walkout would be called had abated.

The attitude of the leaders became one of watchful waiting as Ben T. Osborne, executive secretary of the Oregon Federation of labor, expressed the belief that the action of the longshoremen "doubtless would have considerable bearing on general strike plans."

DANCE HALL BURNS.

Meeting rooms and a dance hall on the upper floors of a three story frame building at 4831 Throop street were destroyed by fire yesterday. The blaze, of undetermined origin, caused damage of $5,000, according to Marshal John J. Costello of the 4th division.

INQUIRY REPORT RULES AGAINST AIR UNIFICATION

Tragedies of Mail Flying Glossed Over.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—The Army Air corps emerged today from its latest inquisition covered with a strange mixture of black tar and whitewash.

The air corps is the subject of a report issued today by the special committee headed by former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, a committee appointed by War Secretary George H. Dern to investigate the causes of the tragic air mail fiasco.

The report speaks of American aviation generally as leading the world. It damns the air corps faintly; suggests many specific remedies.

It points out reasons why the air corps was unfitted to undertake the job of flying the air mails, but glosses over entirely the question of responsibility for that administrative blunder which sent army flyers to their deaths.

Noncommittal on Foulois.

The report takes no position on the demand of a congressional committee for the removal of Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois as chief of the air corps, but in a few subtle shafts of the report he is sniped at.

Gen. Foulois signed the report himself as a member of the committee, although it contained recommendations which are grossly alien to most of the principles he has stood for. Why the noted air pioneer signed it has not been explained, but those friendly to him declare that to refuse would have resulted in his being removed from office, and possibly in being fired out of the army itself.

The report was patently a complete victory for the general staf of the army. As a matter of fact, an analysis of the membership of the committee shows it to have been dominated by the staf clique, and the text itself has much evidence in it of actually having been written by the bright young men in the service of the staf. In practically all controversial phases of the report the reasoning given follows precisely that contained in earlier reports signed by Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staf.

European Example Spurned.

The committee ruled against the growing demand for a unification of the military air forces of the nation under a separate department, and independent of the domination of the general staf. In the opinion of the committee, the arguments which have impelled European powers to adopt the unified air force system do not apply to the United States.

Gen. Foulois has argued vehemently for a separation, echoing demands which have rung before congress since the turbulent days of the fighting Brig. Gen. William [Billy] Mitchell. But the committee followed the dogged opposition always manifested by the general staf, and not only opposed unification of the air corps, but actually proposed a division of the air corps itself.

Balk Buying New Planes.

The report accepted in toto the recommendations included within the general staf air corps program laid down in 1933, but not acted upon by congress and asked that these recommendations be made a definite 10-year program. This would provide immediately—subject to the voting of funds by congress—at least 2,320 new fighting planes, and the establishment of a "general headquarters air force" to be based outside of Washington, and to be used in army maneuvers with land and sea forces.

The report, covering a vast number of other problems in civil and military aviation, was signed by all members of the committee, but one of the members, James H. Doolittle, noted flyer, appended a paragraph stating somewhat plaintively that he was convinced the air force would be better off if it was completely separated from the army, or at least removed from the sphere of influence of the general staf. Failing in this, said Doolittle, he favored the carrying out of the recommendations in the report.

The other members, besides Chairman Baker and Gen. Foulois, are Maj. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, deputy chief of staf; Brig. Gen. C. E. Kilbourne, a member of the staf; Maj. Gen. George S. Simonds, head of the Army War college, and Brig. Gen. J. W. Gulick—all of whom are recognizable as belonging to the staf clique—and four civilians, George W. Lewis, Karl T. Compton, Edgar S. Gorrell, and Clarence D. Chamberlin.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh twice refused to serve on the committee, each time severely condemning the air policies of the Roosevelt administration.

The committee's valuation of American aviation was summed up as follows:

"In general aviation the United States leads the world; it is superior in commercial aviation, its naval aviation is stronger than that of any other power, and with more financial support its army aviation can be raised to a world position equal to that held by our navy."

"World Supremacy" Cited.

In one sentence of the report, which must have been contributed by one of the civilian members, the committee expressed itself as convinced of "the soundness of our traditional policy of maintaining separate civil and war functions, and attributes to a large degree our present world supremacy in civil aviation to our adherence thereto."

With respect to the air mail blunder, most of the committee's pertinent comment is contained in a discussion of "morale" in the air corps, wherein it is said:

"Certainly no one can fail to appreciate the soldierly spirit with which those suddenly charged with carrying the air mail, with adequate ground facilities, with aircraft designed for a different purpose, and with some essential aviation equipment hastily installed, undertook that duty and met its demands."

"Unprecedented Candltions."

In another section the committee spoke of the "unprecedented flying conditions" occurring at the outset of the army's air mail duty, and elsewhere it was recommended that the airmy air schools increase the amount of training given in instrument, night, cross country, radio beacon, and bad weather flying and in receiving and transmitting by radio.

In a whimsical defense of the general staf, whose own members carried the weight of the whole committee, the report states:

"Erroneous impressions have recently been disseminated as to the composition and purpose of the war department general staf. It is pictured as a bureau of the war department, with dictatorial powers and permanent membership, or a sort of distinctive clan. The basic law authorizing this organization was initiated by the Hon. Elihu Root in 1903, and included definite provisions forestalling such possibilities."

Favors New Force.

Outlining the duties which the committee would take away from the chief of air corps and give to a new commander answerable to the general staf, the committee stated:

"The war department policy to organize the tactical combat units of the air corps located in the continental United States into a general headquarters air force is advocated by the committee. It believes this force, when adequately equipped and organized, will be able to carry out all the missions contemplated for a separate or independent air force, coöperate efficiently with the ground forces and make for greater economy.

"It should be organized without delay and commanded by a leader with suitable general officer's rank who has had broad experience as an airplane pilot—his headquarters should be with his troops, away from Washington, and his jurisdiction should include all questions of organization, training, and maneuvers, and maintenance and operation of technical equipment and inspection thereof."

Discussing the possibilities of aviation in the next war, the committee held that "ideas that aviation, acting alone, can control the sea lanes, or defend the coast, or produce decisive results in any other general mission contemplated under our policy are all visionary, as is the idea that a very large and independent air force is necessary to defend our country against air attack."

Continuing this line, the committee declared:

"Contemporaneous writers describe aircraft crossing the seas and bombarding with high explosives and gas our cities, with resulting destruction of the entire population.

"The committee has had computed the quantity of gases of various kinds necessary for effective concentration on areas of given sizes; those computations show the fallacy of the idea presented.

"To carry sufficient bombs for such a destructive effect would require aircraft in numbers beyond the ability of any nation to maintain, even if a type of plane capable of crossing the ocean with a military load, attacking, and returning to its base, can be developed. The losses inevitable in such an attack and the practical hopelessness of obtaining compensating benefit would condemn such a plan of operations, even if a government, desirous of gaining favorable world opinion and allies or at least friendly neutrals, would authorize an attack directed not only against the military and civilian populations of the enemy, but also against neutrals residing in the city selected as the objective.

Air Invasion Held Unlikely.

"The 'air invasion of the United States,' and the 'air defense of the United States,' are conceptions of those who fail adequately to consider the effect of ocean barriers and other limitations.

In a more radical proposal, fitting in with the scheme of the general staf clique, it was suggested by the committee that every officer in the whole army, after serving 2 years in any other combat arm, be required if physically fitted, to take the regular course of training in the army air schools. These officers would then receive precedence in manning the air corps, and any deficiency would be made up, as now from the ranks of reserve pilots, flying cadets and enlisted pilots.

Refer to Leadership.

Shafts which seemed to be aimed at Gen. Foulois included one on the question of morale as follows:

"Definite decision as to the future place of the air corps in the army, coupled with a leadership thoroughly in accord with such decision, would insure the desired results."

Conceding that the air corps was under-manned and under-equipped, the committee argued that this was more true of the whole of the remaining army.

"The evidence presented to the committee," it was stated, "indicates clearly that the whole army, as well as the air corps, is short of modern armament, equipment and transportation, as well as an adequate munition reserve."

CROPS SHRIVEL AS FIERY WINDS SCOURGE KANSAS

Farmers Face Calamity as Drouth Continues.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Manhattan, Kas., July 22.—[Special.]—Tormenting blasts of heat continue to come out of the southwest, leaving hundreds of thousands of animals with parched tongues and millions of acres of corn and other crops burnt to a crisp.

Thermometers in this region have registered above the 100 mark for fifteen consecutive days. At noon today the temperature here was above 105 degrees and was expected to reach yesterday's highest temperature of 109.

Farmers Face Calamity.

Farmers are becoming panicky. No person can travel across Kansas today in almost any direction without realizing the calamity live stock and grain farmers are immediately facing unless they get an abundance of rain and relief from the intense heat within a short time.

An actual shortage of water for live stock is equally as serious as the lack of feed. Wells, lakes, ponds, and streams are rapidly going dry in nearly all sections of Missouri and Kansas, forcing farmers to dispose of their animals or haul and pump water for many miles.

Water is so precious in these two states that some of those who are fortunate enough to have a supply are planning to sell it. At Sni-A-Bar farms, 25 miles east of Kansas City, water for cattle is being pumped more than two miles. It is being relayed from a creek to a lake, from the lake to a large storage tank, and from there to small tanks in the pastures and feed lots.

Hauls Water Two Miles.

Thousands of farmers in Missouri and Kansas are hauling water for five miles or more. James Tod, a farmer near Maple Hill, Kas., for example, is hauling water more than two miles to 800 head of cattle. John Turnbull, an implement dealer and machine shop operator at Maple Hill, is forced to hide the handle on his pump after each trip to his well to conserve water for his own use. Similar experiences are being repeated throughout the state.

The corn crop is almost completely ruined from continued heat and lack of moisture in northern Missouri and Kansas. No amount of rain would save the corn in Kansas except in extremely limited areas. There is still hope for a fair crop in the district near Lyndon in east central Kansas and a small district in the far northeast corner of the state. Practically all of the corn is too far gone for even heavy rains to produce ears, and little of it can be saved for forage. West of Topeka corn always is a gamble in Kansas, and this year those who took a chance will lose most of their seed and labor.

Crop Clipped Short.

About 50 million bushels have been clipped off the Kansas corn crop within the last three weeks, according to crop estimators. This leaves the state with a possible crop of approximately 23 million bushels. Even that calls for an abundance of rain in the limited sections that have had a fair amount of moisture until recently.

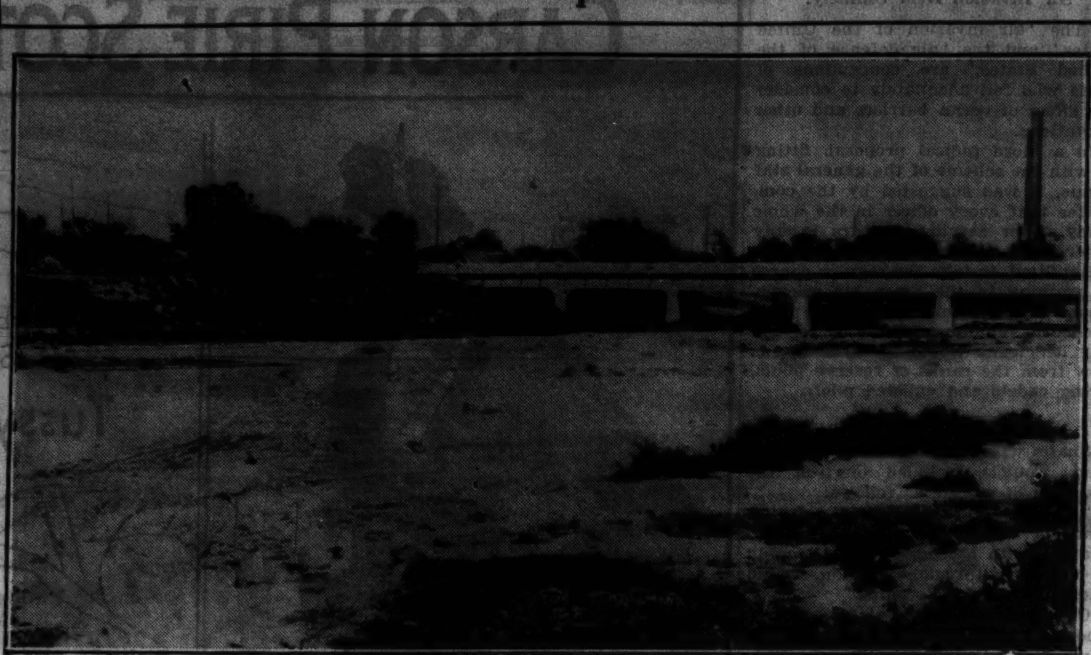
The famous Kaw Valley potato crop has been cut so severely that the most optimistic estimates indicate the yield will be about a third of normal. Extreme hot weather has made it necessary for growers practically to discontinue digging, because the potatoes soon rot after they are put into cars. Up to July 19 only 325 carloads had been dug, compared with 1,257 cars harvested in the valley during the same period last year. The yield is expected to be about 60 bushels to the acre; the yield was 200 bushels to the acre in 1928, according to Jesse Haney, an authority on the Kaw valley potatoes in Topeka.

Fortunate on Wheat.

Kansas farmers were fortunate enough to have their wheat harvested before the state-wide midsummer drouth hit them. So that despite the recent unprecedented drouth and its resulting damage to growing crops, the total estimated value of the state's principal crops on the basis of present conditions and prices exceeds the value of last year's crops by ten million dollars, according to an official report issued at Topeka yesterday.

This increase is made possible through the production of 80,266,000 bushels of wheat this season, compared with 57 million last year. But with the program of growing less with the hope of getting more, the serious reduction in the corn crop will take millions of dollars of the Kansas farmer's gross income for 1934.

Arkansas River Dried Up as Result of Drouth



The Arkansas river, one of the major streams in Colorado, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas, is shown as it appears now at Wichita, Kas., where the stream is only one foot wide, due to the prolonged drouth. Weeds are growing in the normal river bed. [Acme Photo.]

THREE DROWNED, ONE IN THE LAKE OFF OHIO STREET

Three persons drowned in the Chicagoland area yesterday, two in Lake county and one in the lake off Ohio street.

Mrs. Johanna McPhal, 34 years old, 5839 Shields avenue, waded beyond her depth in Bangs lake, Wauconda, early yesterday morning, and sank before rescuers could reach her. Mrs. McPhal could not swim.

James Yore, 26 years old, Telegraph road, West Lake Forest, a butcher, drowned in Diamond lake, 2 miles west of Libertyville, when he lost his grasp while trailing in the water behind a row boat. Yore could not swim. Leo Moran of Lake Forest, his companion in the boat, was unable to recover the body.

Samuel Cacuccio, 25 years old, 453 North Carpenter street, ventured out beyond the life line while bathing off Ohio street early yesterday and drowned. Other swimmers, who heard his cries, called David Russell, 22 years old, a Lincoln park life guard, who recovered the body.

HUNT FOR BISHOP IN MOUNTAINS OF MONTANA FAILS

Churchgoers Pray for His Safe Return.

Glacier Park, Mont., July 22.—(AP)—Montana churchgoers offered prayers today for the safe return of the Rt. Rev. William F. Faber, missing two days in the rugged northern Rocky mountains, while friends pushed a search of the territory.

BISHOP W. F. FABER.

Bishop Faber, head of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Montana and a former Presbyterian and Episcopal churchman in New York and Michigan, left Two-Medicine chalet, where he was vacationing, for a stroll Friday evening.

No trace of him had been found since, and associates feared he could not have survived two nights of exposure.

The bishop, 74, has been Montana's Episcopal leader for 20 years.

Leaves for Short Walk.

He was in good spirits and health when he left the lodge for a before-dinner walk, friends said, remarking, "Well, I'm on my way."

The prelate is of frail stature. Although an adept mountain climber, he was known to have become confused as to directions and distances.

Scores of Civilian Conservation camp workers, forest rangers, and civilian campers joined in the search today. Officials of Glacier National park contemplated extending the hunt to Two-Medicine lake, into which they believed the bishop might have fallen in the darkness. The lake borders the chalets.

Churchmen Aid in Search.

Churchmen who aided in the hunt included the Rt. Rev. H. H. Fox of Billings, bishop-coadjutor and intimate companion of Bishop Faber, and the Rev. Lee Young of Great Falls, who accompanied the bishop to the park last Monday.

DOUG SR., LADY ASHLEY END TRIP, FLY TO LONDON

LONDON, July 22.—(AP)—Douglas Fairbanks Sr. arrived at Croyden airport from Paris today. Another passenger on the same plane which brought the American motion picture actor across the English channel was Lady Ashley, against whom a divorce suit in which Fairbanks is named corespondent is pending. They recently flew to Paris on the same plane and visited in France and at Monte Carlo.

Lord Ashley, in an amplification of charges on which he bases his plea for divorce, last week filed allegations of further improper relations between Fairbanks and Lady Ashley, who is the former actress, Sylvia Hawkes.

Associates of Fairbanks said he plans to go to America soon.

ROOSEVELT SHIP DUE TOMORROW AT HAWAII PORT

Cruiser 650 Miles from Napoopoo, First Stop.

ABOARD CRUISER NEW ORLEANS, ACCOMPANYING PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, July 22.—(AP)—President Roosevelt approached within 650 miles of the Hawaiian islands today as the cruisers Houston and New Orleans cruised under a bright tropic sun and cooling trade winds.

The President directed both naval craft to be on the lookout for five yachts entered in the San Pedro-Honolulu race, which to date have not made port. The yachts still out are the Common Sense of Honolulu, the Naitamba of Los Angeles, the Viva of San Diego, the Scaramouche of Long Beach, and the Quequeg of Newport, Calif.

President Roosevelt is looking forward to a visit with his friend, Harold Dillingham of Honolulu, whose schooner Manuiwa won the trans-Pacific race.

In Time for Harvard Picnic.

Advance greetings from Hawaii continued to reach the President from all parts of the islands and from various organizations. All hands aboard the cruisers were looking forward to the arrival at Napoopoo Tuesday morning and a visit to Honolulu Thursday and Friday. The President has included in his Honolulu program a stop Thursday at a picnic of Harvard alumni, where the Harvard baseball team will be entertained en route to Japan.

The presidential party today spent its third Sabbath aboard ship, attending divine services conducted on deck by Chaplain Saulsbury. Last Saturday the President was an interested spectator at deferred Fourth of July deck games, which the marines won, receiving their prizes from the chief executive.

Natives Wait Excitedly.

HONOLULU, July 22.—(AP)—From Kealakekua to Hanalei, Hawaiians are excited over the coming visit of President Roosevelt. They are determined to outdo even their traditional hospitality.

Kona, where the cruiser Houston bearing the President will anchor early Tuesday, will see no work done that day.

The President's first stop will be at Napoopoo [pronounced as if there were one o instead of two in each of the last two syllables]. Unless present plans are changed, however, the President won't go ashore at Napoopoo but will leave the Houston to fish from a small boat, guided by Henry Palakiko, champion Hawaiian fisherman.

At Hilo, President Roosevelt's next halt, preparations are so complete that secret service men who arrived here Thursday canceled reservations to fly there and remained in Honolulu, where the President will arrive Thursday morning.

There ten thousand school children will line the streets through which the President's car will pass as he drives through Honolulu over Nuuanu Pali, one of the island's greatest scenic beauties. He will continue around the island of Oahu for luncheon and a review of troops at Schofield barracks, the largest single post of the United States army.

Dairy Executive Hangs Himself in His Home

Myer Turk[illegible]ov, 55 years old, 2540 North Lawndale avenue, vice president of the Palmer Square Dairy company, ended his life by hanging yesterday in the basement of his home. His act was attributed to financial difficulties. He is survived by his widow and three children, who were at their summer home in South Haven, Mich.

URGE ROOSEVELT TODAY TO LET A WIDOW WORK

Plea for Breadwinner to Go by Radio.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 22.—[Special.]—The battle of a Brooklyn widow to support her two fatherless children by making artificial flowers in her home, despite NRA inhibitions, is to be put squarely up to President Franklin D. Roosevelt while he is cruising in Hawaiian waters.

The decision to carry an appeal directly to the President was reached tonight by Julius W. Hochfelder, attorney for Mrs. Kathryn Budd. He announced he would radio to the President aboard the U. S. S. Houston tomorrow, apprising him of the "cracking down" against Mrs. Budd, and urging him to modify the executive order against homework in so far as it affects mothers.

May Delay Hearings.

The appeal to the President may delay arguments affecting the constitutionality of the homework code regulations, scheduled to come up Tuesday before United States District Judge Henry W. Goddard. Attorney Hochfelder said he hoped to have a reply from President Roosevelt before the court hearing opens, but even if no reply has been received by that time, the attorney plans to ask Judge Goddard to postpone the arguments "in deference to the President."

The court action already has temporarily prevented United States District Attorney Martin Conboy and Nathan Straus Jr., state director of the NRA enforcement division, from proceeding against Mrs. Budd and other home workers affected by the ban. Both Conboy and Straus are defendants in the injunction suit, and if no relief is obtained from the President, Attorney Hochfelder aims to argue that the prohibition against home work is discriminatory and in clear violation of amendments 5, 14 and 15 to the United States constitution.

Believes He Doesn't Know.

"I do not believe that President Roosevelt is fully apprised of the facts and results of his executive order against home work," Attorney Hochfelder said. "I think the order was drafted by underlings at Washington and signed by the President without full knowledge of the facts. I cannot believe the President is aware that his order has deprived Mrs. Budd and 187,000 mothers in this state alone of the right to support themselves and their children by home work. As the order stands now, only women who are aged or physically handicapped are permitted to make artificial flowers and do work in their homes.

"The regulation clearly discriminates against women who support children and takes their right to work and earn a living away from them without due process of law. I feel that when the President has these facts brought to his personal attention he will modify the order and permit mothers with children to work in their homes."

Fingerprints left by two gunmen on her automobile after they robbed Mrs. Mabel Brummel of two diamond rings valued at $12,000 yesterday were being compared with those of criminals on file at the bureau of identification. Mrs. Brummel and her husband, Henry Christopher Brummel, insurance executive, had just driven up to their home at 737 Kenesaw terrace with a party of friends after an evening at the Knollwood Country club in Lake Forest, when the robbers stepped out of a sedan.

One of them poked a revolver through the front window and ordered Mrs. Brummel, who was driving, to hand over her jewels. She attempted to save the smaller ring, worth $1,000, by dropping it on the floor, but when the robber menaced her she quickly retrieved it and gave it to him. The other ring, a clear blue, four karat diamond of the Marquise shape, set with many small diamonds, the gunman snatched from her finger. He also took her purse containing $10.

With the Brummels were Mr. and Mrs. J. Burtis Dolan, 734 Kenesaw terrace; Mrs. Brummel's cousin, Mrs. Florence Campbell, and the latter's son, Alexander. Brummel is head of the Brummel Brothers Insurance Brokerage at 175 West Jackson boulevard.

EX-CONVICT SLAIN BY TAVERN OWNER DURING HOLDUP

John Daley, 42 years old, 8228 South Wood street, an ex-convict, known to police as "Bun" Daley, was slain early yesterday by a tavern owner in an attempted robbery. Louis Casey, owner of the saloon at 214 West 69th street, was recovering in the Englewood hospital from bullet wounds in his left wrist and right shoulder incurred during an exchange of shots with Daley. Daley was released in January from Joliet, where he served a term for robbery.

PARK 'PEEPERS' ARE BLAMED IN GIRL'S SLAYING

Indianapolis, Ind., July 22.—(AP)—The fatal shooting last night of Miss Garnett Bradley, 25, Richmond, Ind., while she sat in a secluded spot in a park here with George Hendrixon, Indianapolis bus driver, today was attributed by police to "peepers" who had been discovered spying upon the couple.

The appearance of Hendrixon's wife, accompanied by her daughter and her brother, while police were investigating the shooting was attributed to a coincidence. Officers said they were convinced the three merely happened to be in the vicinity of the south side park where the shooting occurred.

Officers were told by Hendrixon that he had known Miss Bradley for two years. He said she came to Indianapolis yesterday afternoon and they went to the park.

He said he heard a noise behind the their bench and found a man crawling on the ground.

"What are you trying make of this?" Hendrixon said he demanded of the man.

Hendrixon said another man then jumped from behind some shrubbery and fired two shots.

Hendrixon said he returned to Miss Bradley and found her wounded. He called for help, but when the police and an ambulance arrived she was dead.

"KING BORIS" OF ANDORRA BALKS AT 3D CLASS RIDE

BARCELONA, Spain, July 22.—(AP)—"King Boris I," the man who lays claim to the throne of Andorra, refused to leave for Madrid today because the government intended to send him third class.

"It is not befitting to a sovereign prince," he held, and straightaway wired for money to Mrs. Florence Hammon, an American woman who has lived in Europe for 17 years and who, authorities say, has been helping Boris with his claims to royalty.

Government officials, however, who are insisting on his presence in Madrid for questioning about his campaign of handbills and his claim of rightful rulership of the little Andorran principality, said Boris would go to Madrid tomorrow. Madrid authorities, who claim Boris is a Pole named Shossyref and an adventurer, have indicated he may be deported.

EAGLE EYE!

IT'S John Kennedy's job to inspect bottles. Bowman has a staff of men who do just that. Bottles are inspected before being placed in the washer that cleans and sterilizes them; again before going to the bottling machine; and once again after they have been filled.

Like the other inspectors, Kennedy is fast. Visitors, watching him, often ask, "How can he look so quickly?" Kennedy has eyes that work as fast as a flash of lightning. He has been picked, and especially trained for his job, because he has what they call an eagle eye.

Kennedy's job is vitally important, for it is part of the minute care given every detail throughout all the Bowman plants to insure perfection.

HEAT KEEPS FAIR CROWDS BELOW NORMAL FOR DAY

But Lake Breezes Make Grounds Fairly Cool.

BY EARL MULLIN.

The Fair yesterday reflected the attitude of Chicagoans and visitors toward the heat wave. Despite the fact that the temperature at the Fair was from five to ten degrees lower than in most of the city, Sunday admissions fell below the hundred thousand mark for the first time in six weeks.

At midnight last night the total of paid admissions was 78,915. Officials attribute the low attendance directly to the weather. Many reservations for events and dining places were canceled by prospective visitors, who announced their intention of going to the country.

Coolest Place in Town.

Fair officials pointed out the Fair was about the coolest place in the metropolitan area during the afternoon, the temperature there ranging from 86 degrees to 81 degrees, with a still more noticeable drop in the evening, in contrast with the 100 degree heat in the western suburbs.

The crowds noticeably reacted to the weather, sitting in cool cafés and spending much time in buildings rather than in walking around the grounds. Sponsors of air cooling exhibits and homes, such as Frigidaire house and the crystal house, had difficulty getting visitors out of their exhibits.

For the first time this year the bathing beach influence was noticed at the Fair. More than a score of girls in sun dresses and beach suits were seen strolling on the Midway.

Crowds in Holiday Mood.

Men also dressed for the weather. Polo shirts, revealing bronzed arms and a generous expanse of throat and chest, were all over the grounds. Clothing which two years ago might have caused turned heads and some comments, was the order of the day. Crowds seemed in more of a holiday mood than ever before, with a majority of the concessions entering into the sport of the day and doing all in their power to aid perspiring guests.

Concessions on the Midway, adjacent to Lake Michigan, got a great deal of play from visitors who obtained bathing suits, dived into the lake and then came out for refreshment.

The beach of the Dutch Village was a rendezvous for yelling young folks, and in the Streets of Paris attendants had all they could do to keep visitors from diving into the pool after the Olympic star entertainers. Another crowded spot during the day was the Black Forest village, where ice skating was the highlight of the entertainment.

DECLARES FULL APPROVAL GIVEN FOR ISLE AIRPORT

Merrill C. Meigs, head of the Chicago Aero commission, who on Saturday was appointed a member of a new committee which will report to Secretary of the Interior Ickes on a site for a central airport in Chicago, pointed out yesterday that the proposed lake front location has already been approved by every important organization.

"The construction of an island airport off 16th street has been recommended after study by the city council, the Chicago Plan commission, the war department, the navy, the United States department of commerce, and responsible officials in local government," Mr. Meigs said.

"Now Mr. Ickes wants us to make another survey of various possible sites. Apparently Mr. Ickes wants to be sure, so he wants us to make another report."

Serving on the committee with Mr Meigs will be Hunt Wentworth, also representing the aero commission; J. C. Dresser, for the Public Works administration, which has pending an application for $8,600,000 funds for the project, and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank and Henry P. Chandler, representing the federal government.

2 YOUTHS SHOT BY WATCHMAN IN LAUNDRY OFFICE

Two 18 year old youths were shot by a watchman, who said he surprised them looting the office of the American Wet Wash laundry, 926 South California avenue, early yesterday. The wounded youths are Italo Borghese, 914 South Fairfield avenue, and Cecil Taylor, 102[illegible] South California avenue. They were taken to the Bridewell hospital. Borghese was shot below the heart and is not expected to live.

Milan Javanowich, 1828 Cermak road, the watchman, told Lieut. James Flynn of the Marquette police station he looked through a window of the office and saw the pair rifling the desks. He ordered them to surrender, Javanowich said, and he opened fire when one of them retorted: "We've got you."

ARREST AUTOISTS IN LAKE FOREST PARKING DRIVE

Policemen were out in force yesterday in Lake Forest arresting motorists who violated the new ordinance prohibiting parking on narrow streets near the beaches. Solution of the parking problem in the village apparently was found when the council passed an ordinance, effective July 4, prohibiting all parking on streets east of Sheridan road. Fifteen motorists who disobeyed the injunction yesterday found their cars had been towed to the police station when they went there to report them "stolen." They were charged with parking in a no parking zone. An ordinance was adopted recently setting aside a lake front parking lot available to residents who hold beach priveleges for 25 cents a year, and to out of town visitors at $3 a year.

CHEER PORTLAND GUEST LEADER OF FAIR CONCERT

Overflow Audience Gives Great Applause.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Willem Van Hoogstraten, whose fame is extending pretty well over the Pacific coast for his achievements as conductor of the Portland Symphony orchestra, is appearing as guest conductor with the Chicago Symphony orchestra at the Swift Bridge of Service this week, taking seven of the concerts while Eric DeLamarter takes the other seven.

For his introductory appearance last night he chose a program of Brahms and Beethoven, the Academic Festival overture and the Fourth Symphony of the one, and the Egmont overture and the Seventh of the other. This is reasonably stern fare for supposedly popular concerts, something from which the average purveyor of summer music would shrink. Yet once again even standing room was at a premium while this program was going on, and applause rose as high as though it had been made up of the most familiar tunes in the whole repertoire.

A Vigorous Leader.

Mr. Van Hoogstraten is a vigorous leader. He has a forceful beat which he emphasizes with left arm, with head, at times with the whole body. There were times when one was inclined to doubt the necessity of working so hard over an organization that knows its Brahms and Beethoven as thoroughly as the Chicago Symphony orchestra, but Mr. Van Hoogstraten gives even such standard works a decidedly personal interpretation, and he imposed his individuality on the performance forcefully and certainly.

He will be heard again this afternoon, tomorrow night, Wednesday afternoon, Thursday afternoon, Friday afternoon and Saturday night.

Mexico Orchestra Coming.

Mexico is loaning its Tipica police orchestra for a series of concerts in the court of the Hall of States this week. This is the organization that gave several concerts in Orchestra hall a few seasons ago, a gayly clad band who wear enormous sombreros and brightly colored serapes and play the music of the southland with a charm that few groups ever equal.

Their instrumentation is as out of the ordinary as their selections. It is true that they have the string and wind instruments of other orchestras, but they add to them with quantities of mandolins, guitars, marimbas, and something approaching zithers. Apparently they never use a note of music. Everything is either memorized or improvised. Whatever it may be, they play with abundant alertness and skill, and are well worth hearing.

Melodies Are Good.

Their program is varied, orchestral numbers alternate with vocal solos, and these with dances. One may not understand the words of the songs but one admits without further argument that the composers of Mexico know how to write good melodies.

Victor Kolar commenced the Detroit Symphony orchestra program yesterday afternoon with a group of excerpts from the Wagner operas played in highly dramatic and persuasive fashion. One of the finest parts of the performance was Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Die Götterdämmerung," "Parsifal" and "Tristan and Isolde" also received painstaking and thoroughly competent attention.

Fire Razes 50 Homes in Porto Rico City; Many Hurt

PONCE, Porto Rico, July 22.—(AP)—A fire in the cty of Caborojo destroyed fifty houses today, most of them homes of poor persons. Many were injured fighting the blaze, including National Guardsmen called out to assist. Authorities estimated the loss at $50,000.

CENTURY OF PROGRESS NOTES

The transportation pageant, Wings of a Century, which is staged on the lake front opposite the Travel and Transport building, is now scheduled for four daily performances due to increased crowds. The first performance will be at 2:30 p. m. hereafter, with the other shows at 4, 7, and 8:30 p. m. as before. The earlier performance has heretofore been given only on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays.

Members of the Detroit Symphony orchestra will be given an afternoon off today and every Monday, it was announced yesterday. They will play their usual concert at 8 p. m.

Prints of what is believed to be the only stereograph, or third dimension photograph, ever made of Abraham Lincoln are now displayed at the Hall of Photography by the Keystone View company.

Herbert Heaton of Hoopeston and Talitha Collard of Carmi, winners of the Colonial Village state-wide essay contest, will arrive in Chicago this morning for a week at the Fair. The contest was sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution. The subject of the essay was "My Favorite Hero in American History." The children will be presented with gold medals at 2 p. m. today in the Colonial Village by Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Exposition.

With the rise in temperatures of the last two days, the mothers of the seven Bedouin children in the Tunisian Village, following the custom in their own country, allowed the children to run around in the nude, throwing buckets of water on each other to cool off. The crowds appreciated the impromptu show until the management of the village ordered the mothers to clothe their children again.

A 3 pound 9 ounce baby boy, one of triplets born at 3 a. m. yesterday to Mrs. Frank Laszczewski, 1017 West 32d street, died early this morning in the baby incubator at the Fair. The triplets were taken to the incubators from the Chicago Lying-In hospital yesterday. The two living triplets, a boy weighing 3 pounds 6 ounces and a girl weighing 3 pounds 8 ounces, have a good chance to live, the physician said. Mrs. Laszczewski, who is 40 years old, has ten other children.

Sylvia Sidney Stops Over on Way West; Sees Fair

Miss Sylvia Sidney, movie actress, on her way from New York to Hollywood, stopped off in Chicago yesterday long enough to make a hurried tour of the World's Fair. Miss Sidney arrived at 9 o'clock a. m. on the Century of the New York Central lines and left for Los Angeles at 12:15 p. m. on the Santa Fé Chief.

The GRO-FLEX SCALP TREATING SYSTEM is based on COMMON SENSE

TRY THIS TEST!

The most famous medical authorities say that baldness and other hair troubles are caused by poor circulation of the blood in the scalp. That's why it is logical to say that to grow hair, circulation must be stimulated.

That is precisely what the Gro-Flex system does. FIRST, the inclined table causes the blood to flow gently to the scalp. SECOND, the Gro-Flex machine (obtainable to no other organization) massages the head forty times more thoroughly than the finest hand massage.

If you have a scalp disorder—hair loss, dandruff, oily hair, brittle hair—Gro-Flex can help you. Its methods are not secret—no mysterious hair oils or ointments foisted on you. We invite you to have a FREE, private examination and treatment.

Here is proof that the Gro-Flex treatment is based on common sense. Yes—and on science. Place your right hand in the air above your head. Keep your left hand down at your side. Within a few minutes your right hand will be white—because the blood has left it. The left hand will be red—because blood circulation has been stimulated.

CHICAGO'S SCOTS PAY HONOR TO ROBERT BURNS

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Around Grant Stevenson's towering bronze of Robert Burns in Garfield park 'twas yesterday afternoon like a neighborhood reunion of all the shires in Scotland.

To commemorate the one hundred and thirty-eighth anniversary of the death of their poet, Scots of Chicagoland came marching beneath the elms. They came with skirling bagpipes and with the banners of old Scotland—red lion rampant on a yellow field—and the banners of the duke of Argyll and the red, white and blue of their adopted land floating in the hot breeze. They came all aglow with poetry, perspiration and patriotism, and then, preliminary to the formal ceremonies of the day, they settled down to reminiscence about their ancestors as far back as the Old Pretender's rising in 1715 and to argument as to the doubtful propriety of certain of Robert Burns' less reticent ballads.

The formal exercises were, as such tributes always are, in the reverential strain.

Fetridge Day's Orator.

The address of the orator of the day, Matthew Fetridge of Evanston, was lofty in spirit and stately in expression. He called Burns "the poet of the brotherhood of man" and he hoped his fellow Scots and fellow Americans were assembled for a far larger and more significant purpose than a mere commemoration of the anniversary—which fell on Saturday—of Burns' death in Dumfries on July 21, 1796, at the age of 37. Their purpose should be revival of Burns' ideals, for they do not die.

"The world today," said the author of "Reveries of a Wandering Scot," "for its own safety needs to become imbued with the ideals of Robert Burns. With the fires of race hatred and creed prejudice again enkindled by misguided minds, that world doctrin which he wrote, that 'creed of the brotherhood of man' which he penned, should be planted deep within the hearts of all mankind—that doctrin which he embodied in just a few lines:

Then let us pray that come it may,
As come it will for a' that,
That sense and worth o'er all the earth
Shall bear the gree and a' that,
For a' that and a' that
It's coming yet for a' that,
That man to man the whole world o'er
Shall brothers be for a' that.

True American at Heart.

The orator proclaimed Burns as "a true American at heart," and quoted from his "Ode for General Washington's Birthday," the hail which the poet wafted across the sea to our rebel ancestors:

Columbia's offspring, brave as free,
In danger's hour still flaming in the van,
Ye know, and dare maintain, the Royalty of man!

"He draws ever closer to the people," continued Matthew Fetridge "because he was of the people. And he stands for them, expresses them, as perhaps no other poet ever has done. His words ring out for them. Remember what he once said, 'But while we sing "God Save the King," we'll no forget the people.'"

Such was the large spirit of the commemoration, and it was fine.

But its intimate spirit—the spirit which bore out every word of the oratory on Burns as the poet of brotherhood—you got by listening to the people as they visited around the statue before and after the ceremonies.

Strange assemblage!

All Classes Attend.

Portly, prosperous merchants in the plaids of ancient clans and with the Scotch burr still in their deep voices; little old ladies who with perfect confidence said to perfect strangers, "And where are ye frae, my dear?" meaning what shire in Scotland.

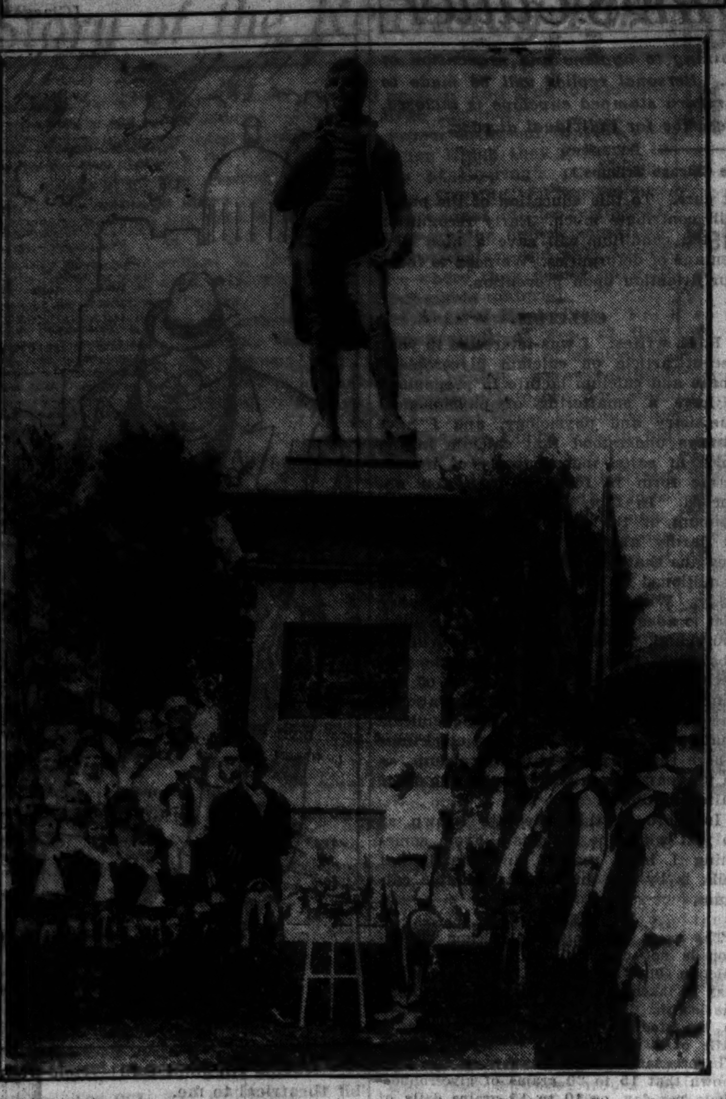
And a master of ceremonies, at once courtly and blunt—Matthew Fetridge's brother William of Oak Park—who said, "It's with conseederable regret that I observe young people occupying chairs while elderly people are standing. And I think, young people, you'll be doing a favor to these elderly people—and a gude favor to yourselves if you'll rise and give the elderly people your seats."

Rise and surrender, the young people did, and with a degree of alacrity and meekness that showed discipline to be no myth in American households of Scottish extraction.

And strangest figure of all to me was John Paul, 2438 West Monroe street, Chicago, an old, old sailor with hoops of gold in his ears and he just dripping with honest sweat and honest pride in the commemoration.

He began his participation in the discussions around the monument with the rather subdued acknowledgment, "I'm only half Scot," but he heartened up considerably on the afterthought.

Scots Honor Memory of Robert Burns



Matthew Fetridge, past chief of the Clan Campbell and royal deputy of the organization in Chicago (left), and Alexander Steven, deputy royal chief of the klan as wreath is placed on bronze monument of Robert Burns in memorial services yesterday in Garfield park commemorating the 138th anniversary of the death of the Scottish poet. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"But my mother was all Scot, and what a man's mother is that's pretty much what he is."

"Aye," said the little old ladies in chorus.

Much cheered by that, John Paul continued in a torrent:

"And my mother was born in Ayr, two miles from where Burns was born, and she was about two years old when Jean Armour [he meant the good, patient soul to whom Burns somewhat belatedly offered the reparation of marriage] died, and my mother knew Jessie Lewars, who helped care for Burns in his last sickness. My mother saw many a time the field where Burns plowed up the mousie's nest, and you'll not have forgotten the moral he put into the poem he wrote about that—

But, Mousie, thou art no thy lane,
In proving foresight may be vain:
The best laid schemes o' mice an' men
Gang aft agley,
An' lea'e us nought but grief and pain
For promis'd joy!

Sailed the Seas.

"You've sailed the seas, I judge, Mr. Paul," quoth I, taking my cue from the gold earrings he wore.

"I have," said he, "and I can sail any kind of craft from a catamaran to a warship. And I'm 78 years old and I worked for the street car company for 25 years, and I don't owe anybody a cent."

A young woman passed the group around the monument. Her bare back was exposed to all the air that was moving.

Sailor Paul observed her with a relishing eye and remarked, "Gude, mon, that lass will fall backward out of her dress!"

With prompt liberality of thought Mr. Paul added, "But Robert Burns wouldn't 'a' minded. He had an eye for 'em."

By a not unnatural sequence this led into discussion of the questioned propriety of some of the bard's amative poems, and Mr. Paul, not without the approval of the little old ladies, said:

"A lot of things we think smutty now weren't so in his time. They didn't have a lot of mock modesty then. They were more honest. You can read some things of Burns' that some folk would call smutty, and if you wasn't looking for smut you wouldn't find smut."

Walking slowly around the statue, Mr. Paul said, "This one is like, I think, the one at Kilmarnock where the first edition of Burns was printed in 1786—the book that put new life into British poetry—and into Scotland."

I kept very still—and marveling. Did ever another poet, thought I, take such hold of the imagination and the affections of a people? Here was no pretense of a love of poetry. The love of it was in the very fiber of these earnest and—some of them—obviously humbly placed persons, and it touched their lives with a radiance that no money could have bought for them.

Such was the lesson of the informalities of the commemoration, and it was not less searching than the lesson of its formalities. Perhaps the simpler lesson was the grander.

The day was sponsored by the Past Chiefs and Chiefs' Association of the Order of Scottish Clans, and the Chicagoland organizations represented on the scene were Clan MacDuff, Clan Campbell, Clan MacDonald, Clan Scott, Clan MacNeil [Gary, Ind.], and Clan MacAlpine [Rockford, Ill.]. Michigan City, Ind., and Elgin, Ill., also were represented.

The celebrated band of the Curtiss Kilties of Chicago nearly skirled its head off in the heat, but as twilight drew on its bagpipes were still triumphantly skirling.

The Chicago Scottish Choral society, under the direction of George Calder, sang some of Burns' loveliest and some of his merriest songs, among them "Afton Water" and "There Was a Lad" [the poet's own song to himself], and Miss Mary Dingwall sang "Ae Fond Kiss"—briefest, sweetest tragedy ever written—with a feeling that made all the young folk keep very still and made the old folk want to cry. Those old folk knew enough of life to know all the song's meaning—even into its heartbreaking quatrain—

Had we never lov'd sae kindly,
Had we never lov'd sae blindly,
Never met—or never parted,
We had ne'er been broken-hearted.

And Alexander Steven, president of the association of past chiefs and chiefs, laid a wreath for memory's sake at the foot of the statue, and the golden day was done.

3 CONDEMNED CONVICTS FLEE TEXAS PRISON

1 Other Slain, 2 Wounded, Guard Shot.

Hunstville, Tex., July 22.—(AP)—Three of the most desperate outlaws in the southwest — Raymond Hamilton, Blackie Thompson, and Joe Palmer—escaped from the death house of the state penitentiary here today in a daring break in which one convict was killed, two others were wounded, and a guard was shot.

The three convicts who were shot, all bank bandits and life termers, were brought down by guards as Hamilton, Thompson, and Palmer scampered over the wall to two waiting automobiles.

Guard Is Wounded.

Whitey Walker was killed by guards, whom the convicts engaged in battle. Charlie Frazier, who engineered the break, was shot from the ladder with which he was scaling the wall and was believed to be fatally wounded. Roy Johnson, the third bank robber, was shot and less seriously wounded.

H. E. George, the guard, momentarily was stunned as a bullet creased his scalp. He was not seriously injured.

The break occurred while the prison yard was almost deserted. Officials and guards not on duty and practically all the convicts were attending a ball game at the athletic field beside the walls. The escape was the first ever made from the death house, located in the center of the prison.

Convict Has Two Guns.

At 4:30 p. m. Lee Braswell, an unarmed inside guard, approached the death house to feed the inmates. As he approached the door Frazier, crouched against the wall, thrust the muzzle of a revolver against his ribs. In his other hand the convict held another revolver.

Frazier marched Braswell into the death house and compelled him to unlock the cells in which Hamilton, Palmer, and Thompson were imprisoned. The convicted murderers came out and Frazier handed Hamilton his extra gun. Braswell was locked in Hamilton's cell.

The four sped from the death house and were joined at the door by Walker and Johnson. A few feet from the death house they encountered W. T. McConnell, also an unarmed inside guard, and compelled him to go with them to the back wall of the prison.

Take Guard's Weapons.

At the back wall the convicts forced Picket Guard Burdeaux to surrender his guns—a rifle, a revolver, and a sawed off shotgun. Then, forcing Burdeaux to stand aside, they raised a ladder they had brought with them. Hamilton, Palmer, and Thompson started to scale the wall, with the other three following them.

Ed Roberts, a guard on duty on the wall about 150 ards from the Burdeaux station, sighted the convicts as they started up the ladder and opened fire.

His shots drew the attention of H. E. George, guard on the other side of Burdeaux's position, and he also joined in the fire.

The convicts returned the fire as they swarmed up the ladder. Hamilton, Palmer, and Thompson dropped off outside the wall.

Frazier was shot off the ladder as he reached the top. Walker was toppled off a second later, and fell to the ground. He apparently was killed instantly. Johnson was shot as he started up the ladder.

Pal of Clyde Barrow.

Hamilton, former companion of Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, was regarded as the most desperate criminal remaining in the southwest, since Barrow and the Parker woman were slain in Louisiana several weeks ago. He was under death sentence for the killing of Maj. Crowson, prison guard, during a break from the Eastham state prison farm last Jan. 16, reputedly engineered by Barrow.

Frazier led the bloody break from the Angola prison in Louisiana last year and also was considered among the most desperate prisoners within the walls.

Palmer, who, according to a death bed statement of Crowson, was the "trigger man" who killed the Eastham prison farm guard in the Jan. 16 break, was under a death sentence for the killing.

Walker, Thompson, and Johnson, who escaped from the Oklahoma prison at McAlester when they left the walls presumably to go fishing, were captured after a series of Texas robberies, including the kidnaping and holdup of a Bryan, Tex., jeweler and the robbery of a bank at Marlin. Thompson was given the death sentence for participation in the robbery.

Five Flee in Sewer.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 22.—(AP)—Two of five convicts who made a daring break from the Eastern penitentiary through half a mile of rat infested sewers remained at large today.

Screened by a crowd of fellow convicts from the eyes of guards, the five men during exercise period in the prison yard yesterday broke open a padlock and dropped 25 feet into the waters of the sewer. Sometimes they had to swim. They came to the street level at a manhole, climbing up on an iron ladder.

STATE STREET BRIDGE AFIRE.

A smoldering blaze in the wooden pilings under the State street bridge over the river was extinguished by firemen yesterday, after Bridgetender John Nicholson had vainly attempted to quench the blaze with a hand pump.

Supplying milk to our Woodstock Station is regularly inspected by Dr. H. C. Wiley

DR. WILEY is a Borden inspector—a University graduate veterinarian. His one job is to see that the Borden standard of quality is maintained on all the dairy farms producing milk for this receiving station. He regularly examines every cow; he systematically inspects every barn, milk house and all milking equipment; in fact every detail that insures Borden's clean, safe milk.

The result of his work—the milk itself—is checked by the Borden chemists. They make hundreds of daily tests that tell the true story of quality milk.

The same inspection and supervision is carried out by the Borden trained staff of veterinarians on every farm delivering milk to every Borden plant everywhere.

Good milk comes from such supervised farms as these. Extra precautions cost money—but it insures absolutely safe milk for you.

NEW STREET CARS.

The receivers for the Chicago City Railway company and the Calumet and South Chicago Railway company have just been authorized to repay more than 3 million dollars of the principal of the first mortgage bonds of these companies. Here is another evidence of the strong cash position of the street car companies of Chicago. They are in receivership, but not for lack of cash or lack of earning power.

The surface lines, thanks to the foresight of the men who drafted the 1907 ordinance, are amply provided with depreciation and renewal reserves. It is to be hoped that the court and the receivers will see the wisdom of investing at least a part of these funds now in new cars. For more than six months now the managements have experimented with a new car built of lighter materials, streamlined, and designed to eliminate many of the noises of operation. By this time the engineers should know what changes, if any, are needed; certainly if they do not yet know what is wrong with the experimental car they never will. Presumably, too, the experience with the new car has been, on the whole, satisfactory.

The money is at hand; the desirability of an improved, more nearly silent car is not open to question; the need for replacing much of the old equipment is clear. The car shops in Chicago can build the new types and in building them would provide work for hundreds of men for many months. Is there any good reason why specifications on a hundred cars of the new type cannot be sent out to car makers within the next few weeks?

A SHOCKING CRIME.

Five employés of a west side dairy company were lined up facing a wall and flogged with chains the other day. The police suspected that union organizers had some part in the outrage, but three officials of the drivers' union denied their guilt and in the absence of evidence against them were set free.

It is to be hoped that the state's attorney and the police will not let the matter rest there. The flogging was brutal in the extreme. The motive was plainly coercion. Whoever ordered that flogging was a racketeer and those who carried it out were hoodlums. If citizens of this community cannot be protected against assaults of this character, the law enforcing agencies might almost as well be disbanded as a needless expense. They are failing to perform their first duty of providing a reign of law to replace private justice.

The detectives who have been assigned to the case should be kept on it for a year, if necessary. No more shocking crime has been committed in this community in many months. The failure to punish it will constitute an invitation to racketeers and hoodlums to extend their operations.

THE ILLUMINATING CASE OF MRS. BUDD.

If Mrs. Kathryn Budd of Brooklyn could arrange a crippling accident which would fortunately leave her the use of her hands she might continue to support her two small children and herself by making artificial flowers in her Caton street home where she was earning from eighteen to twenty-five dollars a week. In the bad old times she would have been regarded as a useful citizen, resourceful and fortunate, keeping a home for the half orphans deprived of their normal support. In these happier days Mrs. Budd, a deserted wife and a mother, but neither aged nor a cripple, finds that if she continues her work the United States will regard her as a malefactor.

Nathan Straus Jr., millionaire state director of the National Emergency council, has revoked the permit granted by the state industrial commissioner. The state apparently is without authority to protect its citizen. Mr. Straus says that the President's executive order defining permissible home work does not allow Mrs. Budd to make flowers under her own roof. The federal government permits home work only if the worker is aged or crippled or if it is for the support of aged or crippled persons.

Mrs. Budd has one advantage over Nathan Hale. She has three lives she can give for her country. Hale's advantage was that his sacrifice was not for that kind of a country. If he had been gifted with prevision he might have taken to his heels long before the British ships appeared at Staten Island.

One of Mr. Straus' press agents is quoted as saying that the affair will look like hell to the public, which is about as truthful a remark as ever came from a publicity man and which proves his worth. To one of Mr. Straus' legal advisers is attributed another sounding phrase which can be taken flat as accurate: "The NRA does not give a damn for individuals. It's the common good that's at stake." An increasing number of individuals will agree with that assertion, though not with its intent.

It is now understood that when Patrick Henry said "Give me liberty or give me death" he was in a lighter mood and was making a jest of some extravagant ideas noised about in Virginia by a few old Tories and malcontents who were about to come to a bad end.

JAIL FOR DRUNKEN DRIVERS.

Judge Scheffler, presiding over the new Safety court, will have strong support from the public, including all reputable motorists, in applying drastic punishment for drunken driving. No man or woman should be under the appreciable influence of liquor when about to manage an automobile or, to put it the other way, no one should take the wheel if he or she is drunk. This should be the iron rule enforced by the police and courts without exception. The offense is inexcusable and its prevalence has been an important factor in the rise of the accident rate. We think every proved offense of this class should be punished by imprisonment. A money fine is not enough in any case.

It goes without saying that intoxication should be established by respectable evidence. It is a charge easily made and opens the way to grave abuse. The mere proof that a driver has taken a glass of beer is not enough. The testimony of the arresting officer that the defendant's breath was tainted should not be given too much weight. Intoxication should be shown and its relation to the accident should be a reasonable conclusion from the evidence. Prosecution and punishment, in other words, should be well founded and the charge safeguarded from abuse. Otherwise enforcement will defeat itself.

Judge Scheffler has also done well to make it clear at the beginning of his important service that prosecutions for bad driving are on behalf of the public and not merely the person injured. They cannot be waived by the latter, and every failure of a prosecuting or state's witness to testify should be rebuked and, if proper in the circumstances, punished. All witnesses to a motor accident owe a duty to all motorists and to the public to give their testimony. It is for the court to determine what the disposition of the case shall be, not any private citizen.

The present accident rate is unnecessary and intolerable and it is largely the result of slack enforcement of regulations, of which strict and certain punishment is the first essential. There are other things to be done for safety on the highways, but law enforcement is the foremost. The public, and especially motorists, should coöperate and, we think, will if the authorities will do their full duty. Attempts to escape regulation through political pull must be marked against those who attempt it, especially politicians and officials. Fixing must be not only checked but penalized.

CONGRATULATIONS, MR. DOWNS.

On the heels of the announcement of the Chicago and North Western and Milwaukee railroads that their Chicago-Milwaukee time tables will in future advertise trains that will accomplish the 85 mile trip in 90 minutes comes notice from the Illinois Central that they will restore the Chicago-New Orleans Panama Limited during the fall on a faster-than-ever schedule, speed up their Creole and Louisiane, and cut an hour from the schedule to Omaha, Sioux City, etc., for good measure. A further piece of good news is that they will construct a modern streamlined, lightweight train for fast service between Chicago and St. Louis, the schedule to be determined by the actual performance of the completed units.

THE TRIBUNE has carried an admonition to the railways to speed up their passenger service in its "Platform for Chicago" for a number of years because we firmly believe that, through such medium alone, can railway passenger travel return to public favor. With their private rights-of-way they can penetrate to the business districts of metropolitan centers at substantial speeds and thus minimize advantages of their competitors. Let them show the public that they are up and coming and travelers will respond with increased patronage.

We cheerfully acknowledge this effort of the Illinois Central to meet what we believe to be the public demand and reserve space for use when other companies follow suit.

Editorial of the Day

SWIMMING.

[Kansas City Star.]

The way to go swimming successfully is to go on foot—or on barefoot, rather—and start right after dinner, about 1 o'clock in the afternoon. You trudge down the dusty road past the cemetery; the dust is pretty hot, but if your feet are properly toughened they'll stand it. And then you turn off and take the railroad track a mile south, and just before you get to the bridge you cut off to the right through Old Man Cole's cornfield.

There are two reasons for this. Under the protection of the tall corn you begin to undress, so that by the time you are at the river you can jump in without any delay. Also Old Man Cole's watermelons are planted there and you pick one up on the way and sink it in the swimming hole so the heat of the sun will be pretty well out of it by the time you come out from your swim. Old Man Cole probably is laying for you in the cornfield, but he's a pretty good old guy and never shoots anything heavier than birdshot, and even if he catches one of us we can always ransom the captive by paying for the melon.

It takes about an hour and a half, and if there are no women or picnics at the swimming hole to cause delay it leaves two hours to swim and another hour and a half to get home. Some authorities recommended three hours for swimming, but we always found that in the temperate zone the lips began to turn blue after about two hours, and it was permissible to come out any time after that.

The homeward trip often was as eventful as the outward. Sometimes it was necessary to detour around Old Man Cole's place on the way back to avoid settlement complications for the melons, and that brought us past Old Lady Crawford's peach orchard, another frequent port of call. That venerable person, however, usually was treated with more respect than Old Man Cole on account of two savage dogs and a particularly vigilant hired man; and besides, overindulgence in half ripe peaches in connection with watermelon often produced distress of a too familiar kind. For the boy swimmer is very watchful of his health in July, knowing that he has a good deal of swimming to take care of before the arrival of dog days.

WILL IT COME TO THIS?

*("Employer in Pennsylvania Offers Strikers His Factory on Condition They Give Him a Job."—*W. G. N. headline.)

Bushville, O., July 24.—Six large factory owners who attempted to sneak out of town after leaving papers presenting their business to their employés were caught by the police and lodged in jail.

Moonbeam Falls, N. Y., July 25.—Employés of the Keepyawarm Woolen Mills are maintaining pickets in the owner's office and have taken away all his pens, inks, writing paper and typewriters to restrain him from turning over the factory to them.

Pahootchie Bay, Mass., July 26.—When the seven hundred striking employés entered the office of John M. Hadcash today and presented a demand that all wages be raised twenty per cent, Mr. Hadcash replied:

"But there is no stipulation here that the man who runs the freight elevator at night gets a raise in his pay."

"Well, what of it?" demanded the strikers.

"A great deal," replied Mr. Hadcash. "Take a look at the new night freight elevator man."

"What!" gasped the strikers, "you?"

"Yes," said Mr. Hadcash, "I have given you boys the whole works and I will run the freight elevator at night."

"Shame! shame!" yelled the indignant employés, and had it not been for the pleadings of some of the cooler heads they would have thrown Mr. Hadcash out of the window.

Popodunk, N. H., July 27.—The state police have been asked to arrest Mr. Notta Nickel, who escaped from his textile mills here last night in disguise after secretly presenting his factory to the workers. He is thought to be attempting to flee to England, but sheriff posses are scouring the woods in all directions and if he is found he will be brought back and chained to his desk and compelled to keep on with his business.

Chappeau Corners, Conn., July 28.—A hard legal battle begins here this week. Robert Felt-Hatter will attempt to prove that the great hat factory he formerly owned is not his property any more, but belongs to his employés, to whom he transferred it a couple of weeks ago. The employés have secured the services of some of the best lawyers in New York to prove their contention that they do not own the factory and that they will fight to the last to thwart any attempt of Felt-Hatter to give it to them. "It's a free country, isn't it?" asked Mr. Felt-Hatter. "It was my factory; I guess I can give it away if I want to." The position of the employés is that Mr. Felt-Hatter had no more right to dump the factory on them than he would to dump cement, bricks, carloads of sand or tons of deadly explosives. They say that here in the United States all men are free and equal and that the attempt of Mr. Felt-Hatter to make them manufacturers and capitalists is an invasion of their constitutional rights and they won't stand for it.

Noosamuket, R. I., July 29.—Twelve hundred members of the Rhode Island National Guard arrived here tonight armed with rifles, machine guns and tear bombs and have been posted in all the factories to restrain the owners from carrying out threats they have made to present their mills to the workers. Injunctions have been secured against the owners forbidding them to take such action for the present, but it was feared they might carry out their plans in spite of the courts, so the National Guard was hastily called for. A massmeeting of factory owners was broken up by the police this afternoon, who found concealed fountain pens on many of the owners. A factory owner speaker was pulled from a soap box just as he uttered the words, "Now, then, let us give——" He was taken in the patrol wagon to the police station, where he was charged with attempting to say, "Let us give our factories to the employés." He maintained, however, he had merely tried to say, "Let us give three cheers for the grand little State of Rhode Island." He was permitted to give bail and released after being warned to be more careful in his language.

HURRAH! Three rousing cheers! The movies are cleaning up! They had intended to change the title of Mae West's play from "It Ain't No Sin" to "The Belle of the Gay Nineties." But, thinking it all over, they decided to use the soap and sponge a little more, and so they washed out the word "gay." That's fine! But we hope the movies do not have any more fears of the significance of titles, because if they keep on they'll have the name of the film finally cut down to "The." Which is a totally inadequate title for a Mae West picture.

PREVENT DEFORMITIES.

INTEREST in the crippled child is world-wide. Plans for his rehabilitation have included numerous surveys that raise the question: Can many of these crippling deformities be prevented? Deformities, once established, may never be completely cured; they may be improved, but a certain percentage of physical handicap will, in too many instances, remain. A recent survey has shown that of the various crippling diseases, infantile paralysis [poliomyelitis] ranks first with 40 per cent, bone tuberculosis second with 30 per cent, congenital deformities third with 15 per cent, and all other causes 15 per cent.

Paralysis, following poliomyelitis, is due to the destruction by the disease of certain cells in the spinal cord which transmit the impulses that cause muscles to move. These cells are not attacked during the first few days of the disease. In certain cases the cord cells are not attacked at all, in which event paralysis does not follow.

Much can be done even after paralysis has been recognized if the paralyzed part can be immobilized in such a way as to give the patient comfort and still preserve the normal position of the limb. This may be accomplished by carefully adjusted splints.

As R. I. Harris says: "About one-third of the operations which are undertaken upon children who have suffered from infantile paralysis are for the correction of deformities which could have been prevented by proper attention to the position of the limb during the long period of convalescence. This failure is due largely to the inability of parents to appreciate the great length of time over which painstaking care must be given to the limb."

When tuberculosis attacks the bones and joints serious crippling frequently results. If the disease is early recognized much may be done in preventing deformities by keeping the affected part strictly at rest and building the child's resistance with food and sunshine. Ultraviolet light plays a very important part in the healing of bone tuberculosis. The disease may in the first instance be prevented by removing children from any contact with persons known to have tuberculosis and by the use of pasteurized milk.

Congenital hip dislocations can be remedied by appropriate orthopedic procedures if recognized soon after the child begins to walk.

The prevention of curvature of the spine depends largely upon early recognition. Any slight change in the child's posture, standing or sitting, should be noted by the observing parents. Muscle weakness, early recognized, may be corrected by proper orthopedic treatment.

Rickets may cause crippling deformities, but with the present day knowledge of foods and vitamins there is no excuse for the existence of this disease.

The examples cited warant the assertion that the prevention of crippling deformities once the disease is established is of more importance than any attempt at cure. To this education of the public will contribute much. Early recognition of the condition will save a high percentage of deformities. We need to focus our attention upon prevention.

CALCIUM.

P. K. writes: I was interested in your recent article on calcium glycerophosphate and calcium lactate in pregnancy. I have a smattering of physiological chemistry and physiology, and I have always understood that calcium in the form of salts, independently of its organic form in foods, is not well absorbed. In fact, I was told that the calcium of the carbonate and chloride is hardly absorbed at all, although I imagine that this is, to a certain extent, conditioned by the calcium need of the body. What I mean is, if the ordinary diet is adequate in calcium for the given individual, no further calcium will be absorbed. Since the lactate and the glycerophosphate are used instead of the other salts, I presume that the ratio of the calcium content of these chemicals that can be absorbed under conditions where the body needs more calcium, as in pregnancy, is higher than in the other salts mentioned.

Is there anything definite known as to just what the ratio is? From something I have read I understand that milk is by far the best assimilable calcium.

REPLY.

The exact mechanism of calcium absorption is not clear. Huge doses of certain calcium salts—for example, calcium lactate—may be taken without deleterious effect upon the health. This may be largely discovered in the stools. The assumption is that a little of it is absorbed.

In pregnant women, however, it has been shown that 15 to 20 grains of glycerophosphate per day, or 10 to 15 grains daily of calcium gluconate will apparently maintain calcium balance. This is in connection with a normal diet.

Milk and leaf lettuce are the best sources of dietary calcium.

INSOMNIA.

H. G. S. writes: Although not a worrier, I became afflicted with insomnia about two years ago and during most of that time never slept more than four or five hours a night. I became exhausted mentally and physically and was finally threatened with a nervous breakdown. A physician suggested that I take two tablespoons daily of a preparation rich in vitamin B. Within two weeks' time I was sleeping six or more hours every night. Within two months my insomnia was a thing of the past. I gained strength daily, and the change in my mental outlook was nothing short of marvelous.

Peculiarly enough, after taking the preparation for a couple of months, all symptoms of colitis disappeared. I also became free of halitosis, which had bothered me for years.

REPLY.

No doubt you had a definite vitamin B deficiency which has now been corrected. Nervous symptoms can and do accompany dietary deficiencies and abnormal food decomposition.

REAL ESTATE OWNERSHIP.

Chicago, July 19.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A and B own three lots "as joint tenants and not as tenants in common." In 1917 A was declared mentally incompetent by the court. 1. In 1926 B, a single man, joint tenant with A, conveyed and waranted the lots to A for $1. "The interest hereby conveyed is my interest as joint tenant," signed B. 2. In 1930 A was declared mentally competent after a sanity hearing in court. In 1931 taxes for two years were unpaid. C records a tax deed on these lots. In 1932 A paid off the tax arrears and C quitclaimed to A. 3. In 1933, for the sum of $1, A quitclaimed to D. 4. In 1934 B learned his 1926 conveyance was not effective because his interest as joint tenant could not be conveyed without A joining in the deed. A, an incompetent then, could not join in the deed. 5. For the same reason the 1933 conveyance is void. 6. It is said A and B still own these lots as joint tenants. If so, what claim has D?

M. M.

1. We would be tempted to say that to convey an interest in real estate to a person who had been declared mentally incompetent was an indication that the grantor was also mentally incompetent.

2. This appears to duplicate the 1917 finding above referred to.

3. In general a conveyance by an insane person can be set aside on his behalf.

4. We know of no such rule.

5. See 4.

6. It is nearly always advisable for a purchaser of real estate to employ an attorney throughout, and we advise you to employ one now.

R. B.

1. We assume that you mean that the deficiency decree runs against you or your husband, or both.

2. Insurance payable to one of the parties who is subject to the decree could itself be subjected to the decree. In general, insurance payable to a named beneficiary is not subject to the debts of the insured.

AUTOMOBILE PARKING.

Chicago, July 18.—[Friend of the People.]—My shop [mechanical repair] and home are located across the street from a garage which keeps both sides of the street filled with cars from early morning until night, so that I cannot park my car in front of my own place, nor can any customer pull in there. The same is the case with my neighbor. Our complaints to the officer on the beat are of no avail. What can we do to stop the garage from hogging the entire street?

J. H.

Officers assigned to investigate this complaint spoke to the manager of the garage about this practice and were assured that he would take all the cars off the street and put them in a vacant lot next to his place of business. This was done two days later. The officers have made several trips to the location and have found no further cause for complaint.

DISABILITY PAYMENTS.

Oskaloosa, Ia., July 5.—[Friend of the Insured.]—My life insurance policies provide that should I become disabled before reaching 60 years of age I would not have to pay any more premiums and in addition I would receive 10 per cent of the policy value every month. Does this mean that after this age this would not apply? If a person is disabled before reaching age 60 how long would such payments continue, and would the total amount of all payments be deducted from the value of the policy at death?

F. E. D.

The disability clause used by the majority of the companies provides that benefits are paid only where disability occurs before the insured reaches 60 years of age. If the insured is disabled and receiving benefits before he reaches age 60, such benefits will continue as long as the disability lasts. The insurance company reserves the right from time to time to demand proof of the continuance of such disability, but not oftener than once a year. Failure to furnish such proof, or if it appears to the company that the insured is able to engage in any occupation, the income payments would cease and the insured would be compelled to resume the premium payments. The face value of the policy is in no way affected by the amount of benefits already received under the disability clause. Regardless of the amount already received, the face value of the policy would be paid in full at death.

FORCED TO PROFITEER.

Elyria, O., July 19.—Code authority No. 21, composed of coal dealers from the large cities of Ohio and not representative of the smaller towns and rural districts, has set the retail price of coal at fixed levels beyond the power of poor people in these small towns to pay.

In these small towns the customer is well able to judge if the coal dealer is making a profit. The customer knows the wages paid. He is aware that most of the dealers in this town have recently bought new cars and other articles.

But what do they think when we tell them we have to boost the price of coal over a dollar a ton? Most of them are having trouble to care for their children and pay the rent. We are paying more than code wages, have been for more than a year; we are making good profits. The NRA will suffer great discredit if these price boosts are not stopped. The dealers and consumers of Lorain county will thank you for any interest you may give this matter.

EARLY EXAMPLE OF STREAMLINING.

Chicago, July 17.—Now and then a caustic comment on the backwardness of the iron horse appears in the press. I should like to remind some of these "gentlemen with short memories" that in 1899 Frederic Adams designed a streamline train which was built and saw service on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

I wish I had a photograph of this train to send with this letter, for it would then be seen how remarkably similar it was to the newest attempts. This train was drawn by a steam locomotive. The engine itself was not streamlined, although it was intended that it should be. But the rest of the train, including the tender of the locomotive, had the rounded, unbroken cross section of the latest models. The windows of the coaches were flush with the sides, and the under parts of the cars were concealed by a metal skirt.

I am at a loss to explain why this early train did not continue in service. Perhaps the railroad was even a little early, a little ahead of the times.

Somewhere, sometimes, I hear that all men are created equal. Were all men created equal? In New York they're conceited and full of air. In Canada they're arrogant and haughty, the blighters. In Detroit they roll around on tin cans and blow the horns. In Cleveland they just exist [don't wake them, poor dears]. All elsewhere they just automatically breathe and open and shut their mouths to eat.

It ain't gonna rain no moh, no moh. . . . I'm back in the greatest little town the greatest country could boast of—Chicago the beautiful, Chicago the hospitable. Chicago, the brightest gem in the cluster. Good old Chi, where men are men and women keep them so.

POLITICAL QUALIFICATIONS.

Chicago, July 17.—It makes me laugh when I read what our President told the future brain trusters at the Yale commencement exercises the other day. If he thinks there is no politics being played in the appointments of federal office holders under the New Dealers he should have been present the other day at the offices of the bureau of internal revenue in Chicago. They cleaned out all the old employés and replaced them with New Deal political appointees. I understand the order came right straight from King Jim Farley, and I am quite sure that the President knows something about the way King Jim carries on.

Millions spent to preserve and prolong the life of this second Christ would be the best investment ever made by Americans.

GERMANS CHEER HITLER, GOEBBELS AT WAGNER OPERA

Cream of Nazi Society Hears "Parsifal."

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 22.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler, who three weeks ago was grimly completing the suppression of the revolt of Capt. Ernst Roehm, chief of his private brown army, and ordering the execution of "traitors," today gave the signal for modern Germany's greatest national kultur celebrations: the Wagner festival at Bayreuth.

The chancellor's handpicked bodyguard, the black-uniformed Schutz Staffel, who three weeks ago were punishing traitors with death, were represented at Bayreuth by 200 of their crack members. They trumpeted joyous fanfares in a solemn procession as an introduction to the festival.

Calls on Frau Wagner.

Hitler, a passionate admirer of Wagner, arrived at Bayreuth by automobile yesterday and immediately called at the Villa Wahnfried which was the composer's home, to visit his friend, Frau Winifred Wagner, daughter-in-law of the famous composer and English born widow of Siegfried Wagner, a loyal Nazi of many years' standing. Her name has been connected in speculation as to the future of the bachelor dictator.

Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, also came to the Bavarian town for the festival. He was accompanied by his wife, a handsome blonde woman. Other notables present were Prince August Wilhelm, son of the ex-kaiser, the grand duke and duchess of Hesse and Prince Philip of Hesse and his wife, the duke of Coburg and Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank. In resplendent garb, they were cheered by an admiring crowd as they entered the theater.

"Parsifal" was chosen for the first performance. The opera, combining medieval mysticism and Germanic folk lore in its broad romantic sweep, held the Nazi audience enthralled. The new settings and costumes by Alfred Roller of Vienna exploited the modern technical improvements in an effort to fulfill all of Wagner's scenic wishes. Hitler, as well as his retinue, were greatly pleased with the new Bayreuth style of coupling "fidelity to the master with modern interpretation of art."

Cheered by Audience.

The dictator and Dr. Goebbels were cheered by the audience as they entered private boxes. The two government leaders again were cheered outside when during an interval in the performance they appeared at a window.

Richard Strauss is the main conductor of the festival. Wagner's cycle concerning the fate of the Germanic gods, which many believe fired the imagination of the followers of the new Germanic creed, is as prominent on the Bayreuth program as usual.

While Hitler was listening to the music in Bayreuth, the German public was still quietly seeking its bearings after the recent political upheaval. The chancellor has, time and again in the crucial days of his career, sought solace and inspiration in listening to Wagner operas. Consequently, many of his closest associates believe that when he emerges from his communion with Wagner, the direction in which he plans to steer his governmental craft will be more easily distinguishable.

Recent decrees are imposing a great task on Nazi leaders. On the one hand, Hitler is continuing his gradual "cleansing of the Nazi party, eliminating those who failed to work with the nation for reconciliation of the classes."

Hunt New Leaders.

At the same time, the government must find new "leadership timber" to direct its economic dictatorship. Owing to a shortage of foreign currency and raw materials, governmental control of the country's supplies and production centers has increased. Since many of the controlers are new men, their activities call for extra close scrutiny of their actions by the police, the GSP [German secret police] and the party police.

The closest coöperation exists between Hitler and the reischswehr [regular army], it was revealed today. Many army officers feel themselves "firmly entrenched as Hitler's closest personal friends and coöperators."

Refugee Claims This Is True Story of the Reichstag Fire

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, July 23.—[Monday.]—The Daily Herald today printed what purports to be the story of the "last surviving member of the reichstag fire gang." The name is given as E. Kruse with membership No. 134,522 in the Storm Troopers. He is said to have been a personal servant to the executed Capt. Ernst Roehm, who was chief of staf of the Storm Troops.

Kruse is now stated to be a fugitive in Switzerland, from which country he is said to have written to President Paul von Hindenburg, the British government, and newspapers in neutral countries.

Here Is His Story.

The Daily Herald's account of his story reads:

"Kruse says that on Feb. 10, 1933, Capt. Roehm, Edmund Heines, and Carl Ernst, all later shot in the clean-up, had selected a group of eleven reliable S. A. [Storm Troop] men, who were summoned to a secret meeting at which plans for the arson were explained. Every one was sworn to secrecy, and was told to await further orders. One S. A. man, named Lobike, refused to take the oath and was taken away and never heard of again.

"Kruse give the names of the other nine men. He explains how Marinus van der Lubbe [the Dutch youth who was later beheaded on a charge of having set the fire] was told he would be arrested and sentenced to satisfy public opinion, but later would be released secretly and sent to America with a large fortune.

"Ten sworn men had to take two rehersals, for which they gathered in the cellars of Goering's presidential palace [Gen. Goering is Prussian premier and president of the reichstag], walked through the underground passage to the reichstag, and were shown the places where they would have to place inflammable material.

Get Bags of Explosives.

"On the evening of Feb. 27 they each were given a bag of explosives, attached to which were celluloid strips. They went into the reichstag, where Heines and Ernst lit the celluloid after Van der Lubbe was in his place.

"Kruse says that of the thirteen men involved, one after another mysteriously disappeared except Roehm, Heines, Ernst and two Storm Troop men, one named Nagel, a friend of Heines and himself.

"At the end of June, Roehm threatened to reveal the truth of the fire if Hitler disbanded the Storm Troops. It was merely by chance that he [Kruse] was not in Roehm's house on the night of June 30 and thereby succeeded in escaping the leader's [Hitler's] vengeance.

"Nazi leaders who have fled to the Saar to escape the clean-up confirm the existence of a Storm Trooper of Kruse's name and detachment, but have no knowledge of his present whereabouts."

NEXT WAR TO HIT LIKE LIGHTNING, PETAIN PREDICTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAINT MALO, France, July 22.—Warning that the next war will break out like a bolt of lightning with unprecedented surprise and brutality, Marshal Henri Petain, French minister of war, asserted here today that France must train soldiers from boyhood and build up a big organization for preliminary training. The marshal spoke before reserve officers.

France, he said, must do what is being done in Germany, Russia, and Italy, where "all the masculine youth is regimented and trained in the use of arms and enflamed with patriotic ardor aroused to a warlike instinct."

So far France has not done so, Petain said, despite the promise to increase instruction in schools and organizations for preliminary training which was given in exchange for reduction of military service to one year. Petain's ideal is a nation in arms. He said French conscripts now arrive for military service without the slightest idea of their duties. He asserted further that one year of service was extremely short for adequate training—a hint that the term of service will be raised one of these days—and the result was that France would be obliged to use less valuable troops than those of 1914.

FLAILS DOLLFUSS FOR KEEPING FOES IN PRISON CAMPS

VIENNA, July 22.—(AP)—An aftermath of Austria's recent vicious civil war cropped out today in an attack on Chancellor Dollfuss' government for keeping hundreds of formerly respected Austrians in prison for political reasons.

A demand for the release of former Mayor Karl Seitz of Vienna from the jail where he has been held for 6 months came from Vice Mayor Karl Winter, writing in the Arbeiter Sonntag.

Referring to continued dismissals of public and private employés because they were Socialists, he said:

"This is in open contradiction to the conciliatory words of the federal chancellor."

Points to Promise of Immunity.

He asserted Dollfuss had promised immunity even to those who bore arms during the civil war.

Winter has been attempting to persuade fellow members of the government to carry out Lincoln's policy of malice toward none.

"Can one seriously invite coöperation from people whose sons, fathers, brothers and friends, and a leader who has been honored for a decade, have been imprisoned for six months on political grounds only?" he asked.

"I take the case of former Mayor Seitz as a symbol. His political trial will never be carried out. The man is sick. I convinced myself of this when I visited him a few weeks ago—not for political reasons but for the sake of human solidarity.

"They should at least permit him, first president of the German-Austrian republic, to enter a sanatorium. Certainly only thus can they make coöperation possible to many valuable forces. There are still in concentration camps hundreds of small Socialist functionaries and confidential agents against whom nothing more can be brought than membership in a formerly legal political party."

Swiss Seize Nazi Bombers.

ST. GALLEN, Switzerland, July 22.—(AP)—Three Austrian Nazis were arrested here today and 30 bombs, in transit from Germany to Austria via Switzerland, were seized. Swiss police were tipped that the explosives were shipped on a boat at Lake Constance.

POLES POUR OUT CASH TO RELIEVE FLOOD SUFFERERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, July 22.—The Polish government's appeal for contributions of citizens for flood sufferers has resulted in an unexpected response from all parts of the country. The relief committee, headed by President Ignace Moscicki and Marshal Josef Pilsudski, reports that cash contributions total $200,000, while contributions of food, clothing, building materials, and other supplies are valued at half a million dollars.

The flood, which took a toll of about 200 lives, began to subside in western Galicia today. At Tarnopol an epidemic of typhoid developed. The dykes above Warsaw broke today, flooding a wide area of farmlands.

Waters of the Vistula river are lapping at the foundations of Warsaw castle, while the grounds of the Castle of Willanov, once the residence of King John Sobieski, which contains the country's most precious art treasures, is covered by five feet of water.

RESULT OF SURVEY ON NATURAL BIRTH CONTROL IS GIVEN

Experts Hold Ogino-Knaus Theory Is Sound.

Results of a local study-survey undertaken by the Latz Foundation, a Chicago institution for the promotion of "the natural birth control method" through application of the so-called Ogino-Knaus theory, or rhythm theory, were announced by the foundation yesterday. They indicate a favorable reaction to the subject from medical authorities who were cited.

The survey was limited, it was explained, to obtaining opinions on the theory from the heads of gynecological and obstetrical departments of five medical schools in Chicago and from the present and four former presidents of the Chicago Gynecological society. Opinions from a few specialists and general practitioners known to have had experience in the application of the Ogino-Knaus theory also were included.

Latz Explains Purpose.

Application of this theory of "the rhythm of fertility and sterility in women," as against the use of contraceptives, is fostered by the Latz Foundation, according to its president, Dr. Leo J. Latz, "for spacing births where physiological or economic reasons warant such action, and to assist in overcoming apparent inability to have children."

All of the physicians quoted in the results of the survey as released by the Latz Foundation agreed "that the fundamental bases of the Ogino-Knaus theory are scientifically sound." The Latz Foundation is supported by proceeds from the sale of a book, "The Rhythm," by Dr. Latz, who is a member of the teaching staf of Loyola university medical school.

The book is described on its title page as "a discussion of the physiological, practical and ethical aspects of the discoveries of Dr. K. Ogino [Japan] and H. Knaus [Austria] regarding the periods when conception is impossible and when possible."

Dr. Curtis Gives Concensus.

After reviewing the findings of the survey, Dr. Arthur H. Curtis, head of the departments of gynecology and obstetrics at Northwestern university and Passavant Memorial hospital, stated the concensus as follows:

"Apparently it has been demonstrated conclusively by Hartman [Dr. Carl G. Hartman, embryologist of the Carnegie Research Foundation] and others that the egg of the human female does not live longer than approximately a day after it becomes free unless pregnancy occurs.

"It is also now generally accepted that the spermatozoa [the male elements], contrary to former belief, do not live longer than a day, or two days at the most.

Results in Regular Cases.

"Finally, we now may state that, in the case of women with regular 28 day cycles, ovulation generally occurs 12 to 16 days before the onset of the cycle.

"In normal individuals with regular cycles the occurence of pregnancy is highly improbable except during a few days which begin 16 days before the onset of the cycle.

"There remains little ground to question further the scientific accuracy of these fundamentals. There does remain much ground for investigation on the exceptions which may be expected to occur in the case of this biologic law, like all others.

"Moreover, there is great need for exact clinical observation to chart the way for the successful practical application of what has been learned in this most important development in medical science."

Authorities whose opinion was sought in the survey included:

DR. N. SPROAT HEANEY, chairman, department of gynecology and obstetrics, Rush Medical school, chief gynecologist and obstetrician of the Presbyterian hospital.

DR. FRED L. ADAIR, chairman, department of obstetrics and gynecology, University of Chicago, and chief of the gynecological service of the Chicago Lying-In hospital.

DR. F. H. FALLS, head of the department of obstetrics and gynecology, University of Illinois medical school and the University of Illinois Research hospital.

DR. HERBERT E. SCHMITZ, associate professor of gynecology, Loyola university medical school, where his father, Dr. Henry Schmitz, now in Europe, heads the gynecological department.

DR. IRVING F. STEIN, president, Chicago Gynecological society.

DR. MARK. T. GOLDSTINE, chief of the medical and surgical stafs, Wesley Memorial hospital, former president, Chicago Gynecological society.

DR. ANDREW C. IVY, head of the department of physiology, Northwestern university.

DR. JOSEPH A. TOBIN, director of nursing education, De Paul university and the university's nine affiliated hospitals, and president of the Cosmas and Damian Associates, organization of Catholic physicians.

DR. PAUL E. LAWLER, professor of obstetrics, Loyola university medical school.

DR. PHILIP M. LAW, neurologist and member of the stafs of the Cook county and University hospitals.

DR. A. E. LUCKHARDT, member of the staf of the Grant hospital.

"Two years ago I became convinced of the authenticity of the Ogino-Knaus method," Dr. Heaney is quoted in the foundation's survey. "As a result I began advising its use to patients who rightfully wished to avoid conception. During these two years in every single case where the prescribed method was followed not a single pregnancy has occurred."

Dr. Ivy, who has done research work under Dr. Hartman, who reached conclusions almost identical with those of Knaus through experiment on monkeys, according to the survey, said:

"Biology might be called a science of rhythms whether it has reference to humans or animals. The best available evidence now supports the rhythm of reproductivity in man as well as in other mammals. There is absolutely no question of the existence of an optimum time of fertility in women and there lies the crux of this whole problem. Nevertheless, just as there are exceptions to every other biologic law, so there must be exceptions to this one."

Medical Coöperation Justified.

Dr. Goldstine declared, according to the Latz foundation report:

"Dr. Latz has rendered a remarkable service in bringing this information to the general public as well as to physicians, the clergy and social workers. I think he should have the coöperation of the medical profession in this most important matter. I have been profoundly impressed by the strong case he makes for the Ogino-Knaus method.

"I am intensely interested in this subject if for no other reason than that its apparent fundamental soundnes promises a way to reduce the appalling number of criminal abortions which are being committed. And they are steadily and rapidly increasing. I consider it a professional duty to assist in this worthwhile movement. I shall advise my patients in the use of this method and I shall coöperate with Dr. Latz in reporting my findings to him."

"The Ogino-Knaus theory," said Dr. Tobin, who is a member of the staf of the John B. Murphy hospital, "Must stand on its own merits like any other scientific hypothesis until it is generally accepted or repudiated.

"As a physician I accepted the Ogine-Knaus method on scientific grounds only and began to assist patients in spacing births where that was needed because of economic or pathological reasons, and my private and clinical practice confirms its workability. Likewise I oppose artificial contraception because as a physician I believe it to be scientifically unsound and a greater evil than any evil it is ever used to correct.

"Religious belief does not enter into my medical opinion. Nevertheless, being a Catholic physician I could not support artificial contraception for moral reasons if no other."

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farm

Rare Crops on Farm

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

July 22, 1934.

RARE crops now being grown for human food, animal feed, fiber, and soil building purposes are thriving on THE TRIBUNE experimental farm, according to a report made following an inspection of the test plots during the last few days by Dr. Earl G. Selveking, collector of these rare specimens of the plant kingdom.

The rarest of these unusual crops and perhaps the most interesting to many visitors at the farm are the three kinds of soybeans that are grown for human food. The Easy Cook soybean is being tried out to see if a new kind of crop can be added to the various family vegetables gardens at THE TRIBUNE farm. It is showing real promise and is expected to continue to make progress and produce seed that can be used in the gardens next year. The plants produce a yellow bean. Yellow beans are common among soybeans grown for animal feed, but the Easy Cook variety softens much more readily when cooked.

The other two soybeans that are being tested with the hope of producing seed that can be planted in the home gardens are the Souse i O'Saya No. 19979 and Chuse i O'Saya No. 19976. Both of these beans are eaten as a vegetable. The beans are flat, sweet, and may be shelled and cooked.

Cooks handle them just as they do lima beans that are shelled while the pods are still green. Sometimes they are cooked in the pods and served on the shell as oysters. The plants at the farm are growing rapidly but it will be several weeks before the beans develop to the size required for cooking. The beans as they come from the field are hard to shell. Farmers' wives have a trick that works in getting the beans out of the pod. After parboiling the beans are easily squeezed out of the pods.

These and other kinds of soybeans dominate the test plots, chiefly because of their importance to farmers as food and feed crops. The value of soybeans have been emphasized this year in the fight against chinch bugs; soybeans are not eaten by these pests. Thousands of visitors at A Century of Progress this summer have been shown how soybean oil is used in the automobile industry.

All types of soybeans planted on the farm are thriving. This fall the seed will be saved from the two dozen or more kinds of soybeans now growing at the farm. The plants will be pulled, tied in bundles, dried, sacked and threshed. After the beans have been cleaned they will be stored for seed.

The Cayuga soybean shows signs of living up to its reputation as a high yielder. It is the first time the Cayuga has been grown in Kendall county. It is named for Cayuga lake in New York. The seed were brought here from the New York experiment station by Dr. Selveking. He is hopeful that this soybean will do well at the farm so that northern Illinois farmers will have a superior green crop to be plowed under as a soil builder.

Another soil building crop that is being tested at the farm is the Junce, a variety of Crotalaria. It is a vegetable. Junce has never been known to produce seed in the United States. Spectabilis is another kind of Crotalaria that is being tried out as a green crop to be turned under. Live stock will not eat this variety. Animals learn to eat the Striata and Incana varieties just as they did sweet clover which was a strange crop in this part of the country only a few years ago.

Dr. Selveking says that Crotalaria is a showy crop. It pods up and takes on a purplish yellow color that is spectacular. It will grow knee high. The Junce variety of Crotalaria is of great interest to farmers who visit the test plots, especially if they are looking for fiber crops. This variety is grown as a fiber crop in India.

Russian hemp, which was making a poor showing in the test plots before the recent rains is now developing rapidly. It offers another chance to introduce a crop that will add variety to northern Illinois farms. It is valued as a bird seed and oil producing crop.

Sesame, the rare crop that resembles pig weed, is another one that made a poor start. It is making a fine showing at this time. Oil is produced from the sesame seed. The seeds are also used for flavoring.

All of the millet, including Hungarian, German, White Wonder, Japanese and Hog varieties, is doing well despite the thousands of aphids, sucking insects, now on the plants.

LANGER ENEMIES SAY THERE'LL BE A QUORUM TODAY

Ask Legal Opinion, Then Withdraw Plea.

Bismarck, N. D., July 22.—(AP)—North Dakota's tangle of politico-legalities bounced into the lap of Attorney General P. O. Sathre today and a few hours later bounced right out again, after senators asking an opinion from him withdrew their request.

Sathre, according to close associates, revealed he had been asked by senators supporting the action of William Langer, ousted governor, to rule on the legality of the special session of the state legislature, called into being by a proclamation of Langer shortly before he was ousted by a Supreme court decision.

The ruling, had the request not been withdrawn, would have held the legislature could meet legally only for purposes of impeachment and only in the event a quorum was present in both houses, it was learned authoritatively.

Quorum "Certain" Today.

Unruffled by the lack of legal opinion, Langerites prepared for their meeting tomorrow, assured, they said of a quorum in the senate, lack of which has been a stumbling block in their proceedings.

Meetings of both senate and house are scheduled for 2 p. m. Should the house vote impeachment proceedings against present state officials, seven of whom have been opposed to the policies of Langer, they automatically would be suspended from office pending final disposition of charges in the senate. House members who are friendly to Langer are to begin the impeachment action. Minority members of the house have little voice and have been consistently overridden in their attempts to induce the members to adjourn sine die.

Seeks Peaceful Return.

A shift in the Langer faction's plans was indicated yesterday when the former governor made a dramatic appearance before the friendly house and asserted "I am still your governor," but indicated he wanted peaceful methods employed in the attempt to regain his position.

Previously, with the calling out of guardsmen and threats of Langer partisans, there had been some fears of application of more forceful methods.

Tomorrow a house committee is expected to report on the method of procedure to be pursued toward impeachment. Following their report, a second committee, armed with powers of investigation, is expected to be appointed, and to start the work of investigating the conviction of Langer.

Meanwhile, new state executives appointed by Acting Gov. Olsen continued their campaign of weeding out Langer appointees.

The ax seemed imminent for twenty-one beer inspectors, who today were instructed by Sidney A. Papke, new head of the state regulatory department, to come to Bismarck July 24, bringing with them any state automobiles in their possession.

Criticism against the beer commission, now being audited closely, was leveled several months ago when a fleet of 21 cars was purchased by the department for inspectors.

WOULD-BE SUICIDE DIES.

Alphone Belgard, 85 years old, 1100 West Columbia street, died of cancer in the Columbus Memorial hospital Saturday. He had been taken there earlier in the week after slashing his wrists and ankles in a suicide attempt.

Supper, Dance Will Follow Uihlein Nuptials

Ceremony Next Saturday at Lake Bluff.

BY JUDITH CASS.

The large Uihlein clan of Chicago and Milwaukee has a tradition of elegant yet unostentatious hospitality which will be upheld fully in the wedding next Saturday of Miss Paula Uihlein, daughter of Edgar J. Uihlein of Chicago, to Alfred Uihlein, a cousin, son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Uihlein of Milwaukee.

The wedding will take place at 5 o'clock at Midwood, the bride's father's estate in Lake Bluff, and all of the wedding guests are expected to stay after the wedding for supper and dancing, a custom that is not general in Chicago, and one that harks back many years to the especial festivities that attended weddings uniting two such prominent families.

Since Miss Uihlein returned from a few weeks on her father's ranch in Wyoming she has been dividing her time between Chicago and Milwaukee, where equal numbers of relatives and friends are anxious to fête this popular couple. Miss Uihlein visited there over the last week-end, attending the wedding of her friend, Miss Elizabeth Stratton, who was married Saturday night to Armin W. Schlesinger.

Out of Town Attendants Due to Arrive Shortly.

Miss Uihlein now will remain in Lake Bluff until the wedding, however, for the out-of-town wedding attendants are due to arrive shortly. Miss Helen D'Olier, who went to school at Miss Nixon's in Florence with the bride-to-be, is coming from Morristown, N. J., to be maid of honor, and Mrs. Ludington Patton Jr., the former Melita Uihlein, the bridegroom's sister, will come from her home in Milwaukee to be matron of honor. The six bridesmaids include Miss Jane Brooks, Miss Eleanor Wheeler, Miss Louise Clarke, Miss Marjorie Bertha, and two of the bride's cousins, Miss Katherine Brumder of Milwaukee and Miss Claire Beneke.

Frederick Uihlein, recently graduated from Yale university, will serve his brother as best man, and ushering will be Joseph Uihlein Jr., the bridegroom's cousin; Mr. Patton Jr. and Albert O. Trostel Jr. of Milwaukee; the bride's brother, Edgar J. Uihlein Jr., John W. Brittingham, and Donald R. McLennan Jr. of Chicago; Abram Rose Jr., who married the former Moxie Kopmeier of Milwaukee, and Ivy Lee Jr., who both went to Princeton with the bridegroom and who live in New York; John Larkin Jr. of Hillsboro, O., and Lindsay Heimholz of Rochester, Minn.

Parties this Week for Bridal Couple.

There already has been a great deal of entertaining for Miss Uihlein and her fiancé, but a few parties are scheduled for the last days before the wedding. Miss Bertha will give the spinster dinner Wednesday night at the home which her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Bertha, have taken on Tower road in Winnetka for the summer, and Mr. McLennan will give the bachelor dinner at the home of his parents in Lake Forest at the same time. Miss Beneke will give a cocktail party before these dinners at her parents' home in Highland Park.

Thursday night Miss Jane Brooks will entertain at dinner at home and take her guests on to the Onwentsia for the dance, and on the eve of the wedding Mr. Uihlein will give the bridal dinner for his daughter at Midwood.

Potter Palmers in City for 26th Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer, who will celebrate their 26th wedding anniversary next Friday, are spending a few weeks in Chicago, stopping at the Palmer house, but are not planning a party for the occasion. The Palmers went east a few weeks ago and opened their Bar Harbor home, where last year for their silver anniversary all of their family was gathered for a merry dinner, but they returned to Chicago last week and will be here for two or three weeks more. It is likely that they will dine with Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer III., who are remaining here for the summer, and the Oakleigh Lewis Thornes (Bertha Palmer), who are in Lake Forest, on Friday.

Miss Pauline Palmer accompanied her parents west. She will not be presented to society during the coming season, nor have Mr. and Mrs. Palmer decided definitly just what she will do unless they send her abroad for a year. The younger Mrs. Palmer's mother, Mrs. West Movius of Boston, is expected to arrive in Chicago this week for a visit.

Mrs. Montgomery Keith Marries Count de Guichard.

The marriage of Mrs. Montgomery Keith, the former Florence Montgomery of Chicago, to Andre Baume, Count de Guichard, last Thursday climaxed a romance that was begun three years ago when the former wife of Walter Winchester Keith of Chicago and Baltimore lived in Paris. The ceremony was performed quietly in the bride's apartment in the Lincoln Park West apartment hotel, and the count and countess left yesterday to spend a few days in Lakewood, O., a suburb of Cleveland. On their return to Chicago they will be at home at the Edgewater Beach apartments.

The two most interested witnesses at the marriage ceremony were the bride's two sons, Walter W. Keith Jr. and Carroll Keith. They are grandsons of the late Walter W. Keith of Chicago and Baltimore, and Mrs. Keith, who is living in Baltimore now; and grandnephews of Mrs. Honoré Palmer and Mrs. Stanley Field. The boys attended school in Asheville, N. C., last winter, their mother also spending the winter in Asheville, and they will return to the school in the fall. The Countess de Guichard was

Nancy McCord Wins Applause with Ballads

Critic Praises Her Manner and Musicianship.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

The most interesting personality of the current week's vaudeville programs is Nancy McCord, who brings operatic voice and style to the bill at the Palace theater. This young prima donna, recently a star of "All the King's Horses," at the Grand Opera house, leans gracefully against a piano and sings a series of ballads with cool detachment and exquisite musicianship.

She does not vaudevillize herself in the slightest degree; neither does she assume the airs of a concert artist condescending to four performances a day. She merely stands there smilingly and sings like a Trilby of Park avenue, and the patrons of the Palace applaud her as loudly as if she were a cinema queen . . . Sammy White, remembered as a comedian who served in the first "Show Boat" production, is the master of ceremonies and gladhand comic of this bill.

Playgoers who want to see Michael MacLiammoir in "Hamlet" but are unable to find motor transportation to and from Woodstock, Ill., are advised that a Chicago and North Western train will take them there in time for the performance, and that the management of the Woodstock Drama festival, if advised in advance, will transport them by bus, after the performance, to the Lake Forest station on the North Shore electric line. This information is printed in response to telephone calls to THE TRIBUNE from prospective pilgrims to Woodstock. The first performance is scheduled for next Thursday night.

Man o' War's Owner Turns Down Offer of Movie Role for Him

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., July 22.—[Special.]—The prospective motion picture career of Man o' War, world's best known race horse, has been blocked not because the famous "Big Red" didn't show the stuff of which movie stars are made in his screen tests [the newsreels], but because his boss, Sam Riddle, owner of Glen Riddle stables, thinks it too dangerous to permit the stallion to make the journey from Lexington, Ky., to Hollywood.

Man o' War was sought to play as co-star with Lee Tracy in the Damon Runyon turf story, "The Lemon Drop Kid." Paramount studio wired its offer to the horse's owner because the studio wanted the most famous horse it could get in the part. It also was figured the mere presence of Man o' War in a movie would be the same kind of box office tonic that the presence of Clark Gable, Bing Crosby, or Jimmy Cagney is for a film.

The studio could insure the horse for his railroad journey and his stay here on his present value, it was found, but if anything were to happen to such a valuable property as the 18 year old turf champion, legal experts feared that the insuring parties could be sued for the huge sums Man o' War is estimated to net his owners in his future efforts for equine posterity.

There is a possibility that Morvich, 1922 winner of the Kentucky Derby, will get the movie chance that Man o' War can't take.

Mystery—
Twins—
Give away—
Song writer.

A DINNER was given at the naval armory the other evening in honor of the Scotch regiment, the 48th Highlanders, who were in Chicago last week. Ranking officers of the army and navy attended, and it was a colorful affair. Unfortunately, when it was time to go home, Admiral Wat T. Cluverius was unable to find his admiral's hat. Adorned with some $25 worth of gold braid, it has some intrinsic value, but what probably is puzzling Admiral Cluverius is what anybody wants with an admiral's hat. If Charlie MacArthur were in town, suspicion might fall on him. There was a tale about him some time back, in connection with a party aboard the yacht of the late Otto Kahn, to which he had been invited. MacArthur never got to the party that evening at all, but arrived at high noon the next day in the dress uniform of an admiral.

OLD TIMERS who have been reminiscing about Warrenville, the village that lies near Wheaton on Roosevelt road, have uncovered some tales about the Warren twins, Maria and Marie, in connection with the centennial to be celebrated the first week-end in August. Maria and Marie Warren were in their teens when Warrenville was a promising mill town. Marie afterwards married Silas Cobb, for whom Cobb hall at the University of Chicago is named, and Maria married Jerome Beecher, for whom Beecher hall is named. Mrs. John M. Player of Warrenville tells the story.

The two girls were helping at the Tavern when a teamster who had brought in a wagonload of wheat to be ground at the mill came in for breakfast. The griddlecakes were good and he asked for more, whereupon one of the twins bet him she could eat more griddlecakes than he could.

He ate until he was comfortably full and she kept pace with him, to his amazement. Finally, with a look of mingled wonder and chagrin, he had to admit he was beaten. Then peals of laughter came from the kitchen, the door opened, and in walked Marie [or was it Maria] with another plate of griddle cakes which she and Maria [or Marie] proceeded to eat. The twins told him the bet was off, as it had taken both of them to win it.

HE was immaculate and military of bearing, as were his comrades of the 48th Highlanders, and as he took his seat on the bus top, he drew admiring glances.

"Scotch all right," a passenger behind him remarked to his companion.

"Certainly," she responded. "Didn't you see his kilties?"

"That's not how I tell him," the passenger returned. "Look!"

He pointed to the Highlander's right ear. Parked neatly under the beribboned cap and nestling close to his head was a half-smoked cigaret.

A SAD letter in the mail was from a lad who says he knows that he is as great a composer as Irving Berlin, yet goes on writing beautiful compositions with the grim knowledge that he must go to sleep hungry just the same. He encloses the lyric for his little gem, which he wrote and tucked under his arm, and went out vainly in search of some one who might be interested. It's called "The World's Fair Waltz," and the words of the chorus are pretty nice, in our opinion:

"Brilliant colored lights
Outshine the starry nights,
As we dance the World's Fair waltz.
We can find our romance in most any atmosphere,
The corners of the world are here.
Magic dreams come true—
It's heavenly for two,
While dancing the World's Fair waltz."

"I am 24 years old and out of work, hanging on to the slim hope of some day convincing somebody of my ability," he concludes, and signs the letter "Spencer Bond."

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

To Charles Collins, Dramatic Editor:

Some people follow the races and some people follow examples, and I see by your column that you have been following "The Drunkard" all over town, from the Opera club to the Auditorium hotel. [I saw you there the other night. Wasn't it FUNNY? I laughed till I ached and, at the olio afterward, sang till my throat gave out. Did you sing? I thought I saw you . . . ?] But what I'm getting at IS—you can see "The Drunkard" AGAIN if you want to! At the Chicago theater. Not all of it—I'm sorry!—but part of it, because the play is part of W. C. Fields' new picture, "The Old Fashioned Way."

You see, he's the great McGonigle, who heads a répertoire company, and "The Drunkard" is part of the répertoire.

Mr. Fields plays the villain and also performs tricks of legerdermain at the after show, and he has a pretty daughter who is being followed from town to town by the son of a rich man who wants to marry her. [The son, not poppa.] Only she won't for a long time because she thinks he should go back to college, where he's escaped from. But, la, it all comes out all right, don't worry! After a TIME it comes out all right . . .!

McGonigle is always just about one jump ahead of the sherif. In the little town of Bellefontaine the sherif catches up with him. . . .

The picture is a little slow at the start, but after it gets going is amusing in its homely way.

Mr. Fields plays McGonigle as Mr. Fields would, which is plenty good enough for us, isn't it, Mr. Collins?—and the other players, O, I meant to TELL you—some of them are supposed to be from the original "Drunkard" cast—do very nice work, only the ones at the Auditorium are more comical, I thought.

Do you know, Mr. Fields never before that I can remember, struck me as being pathetic. As McGonigle, a thorough if lovable ne'er-do-well, he had me feeling sorry for him. I liked the feeling.

Well, good-by, Mr. Collins. I hope you hope I have a nice vacation.

"MIDNIGHT ALIBI."

Story, "The Ole Doll's House," by Damon Runyon.
Presented at the Roosevelt theater.
THE CAST.

Abigail as girl	Helen Chandler
Hughie	Harry Tyler
Ardsley	Henry O'Neill
Angie	Robert Barrat
Black Mike	Vincent Sherman
Watts	Eric Wilton

Babe	Paul Hurst
Slim	Boothe Howard

The writer is coming into his own, all right, all right! Damon Runyon, who authored "Midnight Alibi," and also "Lady for a Day" and "Little Miss Marker" has his name on the Roosevelt sign in letters almost as large as the title's.

It's a good little story he told, and the picture adaptation is interesting with quaint turns and "different" sort of punches.

The Old Doll is a sweet and stately maiden lady of some seventy years. A tragedy of her youth, in which her father shot her lover—who could not reach safety because her door was bolted—has caused her to keep her locks unlocked ever since in case some other young man might come stumbling her way in search of sanctuary.

One does. None other than Lance, a tough young fellow who's in love with a rival egg's sister. . . .

In the excitement and romance that follow Miss Abigail plays a star rôle. . . .

The picture is entertaining, well directed, and splendidly staged. The acting is intelligent and sympathetic. Mr. Barthelmess, engagingly slim again, is a likable and agile hero, and I quite lost my heart to Helen Lowell as Miss Abigail.

Intriguing Autumn Textiles to Make All Ladies Lovely

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Few, and darn few, of the newest fall models of anything are here.

The incoming fabrics are unquestionably the most intriguing of the fall arrivals. Textile manufacturers are going to make lovely ladies out of us all. Soft woolens that will drape and cling are miraculous lengths of suedelike stuff, even for simple street dresses. Glitter and shimmer, gleams and glistening effects will mark everything, even the new jerseys.

Flecks of metal will be found in practically all the new materials, with cellophane getting a big hand when it is properly and cunningly distributed throughout wool.

Coat materials are coming in beautiful new shades as well as textures. Most of the newest are of indistinct diagonal weaves, soft, and easy to work into slim, semi-fitted streamlines of fashionable winter coats.

The best of the browns is a shade called sherry, a rich golden brown that anybody can wear. All kinds of black are first, with brown in second place, and stunning pine needle green tones coming in, yard by yard, in third place. A new dark color that will take your eye is called black cherry, with an anthracite gleam, or if you must be literal, it does look like the shade of big black "bing" cherries. This last color tip comes via millinery authorities who have unpacked the dashing new hats from Paris.

Fashion photograph . . . cooling information for negligee buyers. Flounced and wide sleeved, this colorful summer number is of checked cotton as thin and cool as it is good to look at. You can buy it for an extremely low price in a Chicago shop. Many color combinations available.

Her Husband's Fiancee

BY ELIZABETH YORK MILLER

SYNOPSIS.

Cecily Marshall returns after a year's absence to the home in Bellchester, England, where she had lived with her husband, David Marshall, the city's leading merchant prince. Cecily had been a shopgirl at Marshall's. Beautiful Audrey Lowe, who had wanted David herself, and her cousin, Reggie Davies, had contrived to break up Cecily's marriage. David believed Cecily unfaithful and won a divorce from her and the custody of their small child, Rose Ann. The child doesn't know the cause of her mother's long absence and grieves for her. Fearing for the child's health, Nanna, her nurse, wires Cecily. David, who is about to marry Audrey, is giving a dinner party for her when Cecily arrives. Nanna admits Cecily secretly. David stops in the nursery before retiring and sees Cecily sleeping beside Rose Ann. Suspecting she plans to kidnap the child, he lies in wait till morning.

INSTALMENT VII.
JEALOUS WRATH.

Finally Cecily's patience snapped. Nanna was trying to delay her.

"If you don't hurry I'll take her just as she is," said Cecily, "and then she'll catch her death of cold. She's my baby, isn't she? I've got a right ——."

"I'm your baby and daddy's," chirped Rose Ann. "Isn't daddy up yet? Shouldn't we say good-by to him? Maybe he'll be able to come with us, mummy, if we ask him. I went on a train with daddy before, but this time it will be ever so much nicer."

"She's fond of her daddy, too," said Nanna with a sniffle. "Whatever shall I do?"

But in Cecily's heart there was something of that hardness which matched David's this morning.

She won the day where Nanna was concerned by mentioning Miss Audrey Lowe.

"What do you imagine it will be like when he's married to Miss Lowe?" she said incautiously.

Rose Ann pricked up her ears.

"How can daddy marry Miss Lowe, mummy? He's married to you, isn't he?"

"Hush, hush, my lamb, you don't know what you're saying," Nanna enjoined Rose Ann.

A crafty look crossed the child's face.

"Oh, yes I do," she said pertly. "I heard Mason and Ellen talking about it in the pantry. They said mummy would never come back again and that Miss Lowe was going to be daddy's new wife. But she can't—can she?—because mummy has come back."

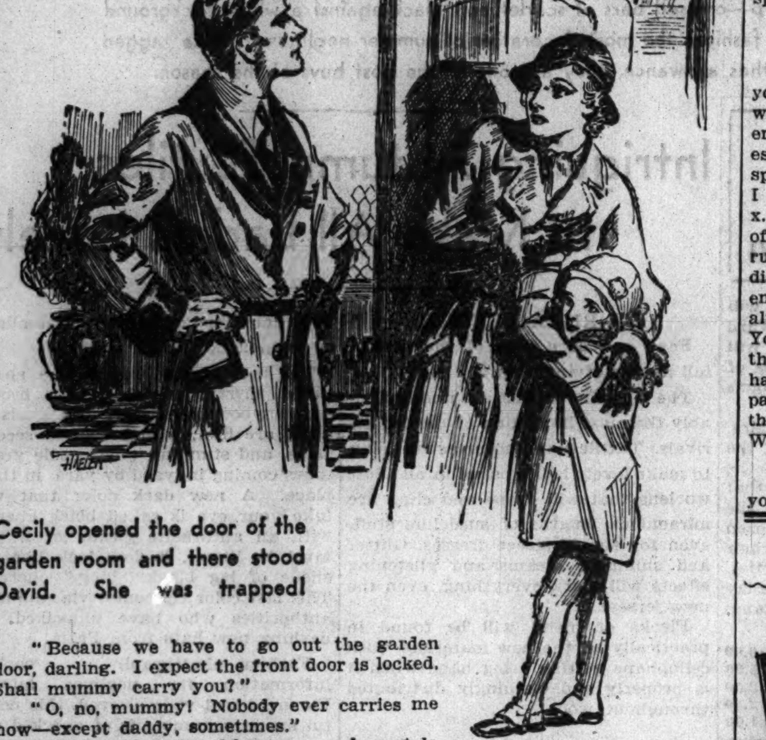
Cecily's lips tightened and she took her child by the hand.

"We're going now, Nanna. You see, I—I've got to take her now, haven't I? Nanna, do try to understand."

"I understand," the old woman replied.

"You mustn't make a noise, darling," Cecily cautioned. "You see, it's so early and we don't want to wake anybody."

"Why are we going down these stairs?" whispered Rose Ann.



Cecily opened the door of the garden room and there stood David. She was trapped!

"Because we have to go out the garden door, darling. I expect the front door is locked. Shall mummy carry you?"

"O, no, mummy! Nobody ever carries me now—except daddy, sometimes."

Through the deserted lounge . . . how stale and smoke-fogged it smelled! Cecily opened the door of the garden room, and there sat David.

Trapped. Cecily loosened her clasp on the child's hand and fell back against the door.

"Thought you were being very clever, didn't you?" said David in a voice of ice.

"Daddy, it's mummy. Don't you know her?" Rose Ann asked anxiously. Her lips trembled. "Daddy, aren't you glad?" she whispered.

"I'm delighted, my dear. More so than you can imagine."

"I—I 'spect you're surprised. I wasn't so surprised, though. Nanna said she thought mummy would come home last night, and she did. We slept in the same bed."

"That must have been a little uncomfortable for both of you," said David.

"She's mine—she's more mine than she is yours," Cecily said in strangled tones. "You had no right to ——."

He put his finger on the bell and kept it there until the flustered housemaid appeared.

No need to ask Ellen if she had had anything to do with this outrage. Her look of blank astonishment was sufficient to acquit her.

"Take Miss Rose Ann upstairs and keep her there, and tell Nanna to come down here immediately," said David.

"Y-yes, sir."

"David!" Cecily cried.

She had forgotten herself entirely now and made a movement to snatch Rose Ann in her arms, but David got between them.

"Do as I tell you," he said to Ellen.

"Y-yes, sir. Come along, Miss Rosie."

But all those months of repression were unbottled where Rose Ann was concerned and she was carried from the garden room kicking Ellen's shins and screaming the place down. No need for the housemaid to deliver that message to Nanna. The old woman was coming as fast as she could and they encountered in the lounge.

"O, my poor lamb!" Nanna cried agast.

"He's going to send mummy away again and I'll never see her any more. I won't go with Ellen," shrieked Rose Ann.

David had to take Rose Ann upstairs, himself, and promise her impossible things before the hysteria was half way subdued.

Leaving Ellen in charge of the still sobbing child, he hurried back to the two culprits.

Cecily looked like death itself. She had staggered to a chair and Nanna took off her hat and loosened her neck scarf. Nanna, herself, was fairly calm. The worst had happened—the very worst—and she felt herself emerging from it like a proud and stately ship that has weathered a hurricane.

"Bring a little brandy, Mr. David," she said, with tight lipped severity.

Thus she struck the initial blow, and, curiously enough, David succumbed to it. At least he did bring the brandy.

"You'd ought to be ashamed of yourself," said Nanna.

But that was a little too much. David laughed harshly, but made no comment on her remark.

What he said was: "You go straight upstairs, Nanna, and pack your things. Tell Mason to telephone for a taxi. I'll give you twenty minutes, and then out you go—you, and this—er—this lady whom you so kindly invited to spend the night with us. I'll look after her while you do your packing."

Nanna drew in a deep breath and then exploded.

"You're a cruel man, Mr. David, and God will pay you out for it one of these days. Who's to look after the bairn?"

"That needn't trouble you. Are you going to do as I tell you, or must I summon the police?"

"David Marshall, your father would turn in his grave if he could hear you say that . . ."

"Please go, Nanna," Cecily said wearily. She, at least, knew when she was beaten.

Nanna flounced out and banged the door behind her. Upstairs they could hear Rose Ann, who had started screaming again.

"A nice way to express your 'mother love,'" David said sarcastically.

Cecily's breast heaved.

"David, I'm sorry—but you didn't seem to realize how ill she was. Nanna says she hasn't eaten or slept properly for months. Surely the doctor must have told you . . . Always asking for me and having those unhappy dreams. David, I had to come. I couldn't keep away."

"You'll keep away after this, or I'll know the reason why," David said savagely. Cecily was tearing his heart, but he wasn't going to let her see it.

She dropped that note of appeal.

"I won't," she said.

"What do you mean?"

"I mean I shall stay in Bellchester and fight you—fight you tooth and nail. At first I—I was too stunned and hurt to realize just exactly what had happened to me. When they told those lies in the witness box I knew then that the whole thing had been planned by some one. Perhaps by you, for all I know. You wanted to get rid of me so you could marry Audrey."

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

IF A NO-TRUMP OPENING BID CONCEALS A LONG SUIT THAT SUIT MUST BE VERY STRONG

I feel I should devote some time to this subject for fear that your enthusiasm for concealing a suit may tempt you to do so under circumstances which would render such procedure disastrous. Please do not seek excuses for refraining from bidding a suit, and bidding no-trumps instead, just because it is a novel idea. Remember that it may cause consternation to your partner if you are set in no-trumps when game in a suit could have been made against any defense. Such disasters are most frequently caused by concealing a suit which is not solid in a hand which has a weak spot.

The Time Factor Is the Key to Your Decision.

When you have complete control of your long suit, so that no high card will have to be forced out of the enemy's hands before that suit is established, you need not fear a weak spot in another suit. By "weak spot" I mean a single stopper—K x or Q J x. You are able to win an early round of the hostile suit and then you can run your strong suit and make them discard. You will have gathered in enough tricks to avert a serious penalty before you surrender the lead. Your contract of one no-trump should therefore not be a bad one. If you have reached three no-trumps your partner's hand should protect you to the extent of the two additional tricks. With such a hand as

Sp. A x x — Di. K J x
Hts. K x — Cl. A K Q x x

you control the time factor in your own suit. You may expect to run five clubs as soon as you are in; with the ace of spades and whichever red king you get in with you can see seven tricks. If the clubs do not break, your hopes will be disappointed, but the odds are in your favor.

Lacking the Ace of Your Long Suit You Lack the Timing.

Change this hand to

Sp. A Q x — Di. K Q x
Hts. K x — Cl. K Q J x x

and the no-trump bid would no longer be advisable. You cannot run the clubs until the ace has been forced out; only if your partner has hearts is the hand safe in no-trumps. If the adversaries have the other heart honors and the ace of clubs they will knock out your king of hearts, and you will then have to play clubs and let them in to run the rest of their hearts against you. The time factor is not in your favor, as they will establish their suit before you can establish yours.

With the hand given above bid a club, hoping to make it easy for your partner to give you a "one-over-one" in hearts. If he does so bid two no-trumps, not three no-trumps, as that would be a slam invitation, which, with only one ace, would be lunacy. If he now takes you to three no-trumps, pass. If to three hearts or three in another suit bid three no-trumps, and that will close the bidding. Unless your partner could immediately make a jump takeout there can be no slam.

If your partner's first response was not a heart but a no-trump bid two no-trumps—a strong invitation to him to rebid unless he was on the verge of passing your original bid. If your partner's first response over a club is a diamond or a spade bid two no-trumps and continue to three no-trumps, as you now have his suit to play for immediately instead of your own club suit, and it is important that the probable opening lead of a heart should come up to your hand.

Wife Resents Being Called by Ex-Love's Name

BY DORIS BLAKE.

What could be more disillusioning to a bride of a few months than to have her mate call her by the name of an old flame instead of her own?

We think you men had better learn to call them all "Honey" or "Sweetheart," just to avert such casualty.

Another vagary of yours that somehow slays the laugh on the lips of a loving femme is admiring all the girls that pass by. Constant Reader happens to have drawn a man with both charges now standing against him—calling his wife by an old flame's name and not letting a gal get by without giving her the admiring eye. Not that either crime is sufficient, in our opinion, to jail a man.

Still, we think, knowing our own sex pretty well, that unless you want to make a jail out of your home, boys, you'd better take a tip from mamma and curb the eye and tongue somehow.

We think, of course, that a young wife is getting off to a wrong start if she is going to make trouble over every little slip of the tongue and eye. Maybe there was a girl back in the old days that left an indelible impression on the man. What can you do about it? Why do you want to do anything about it but help the man to forget? You have him now. The chances of the other girl being a mere memory soon will depend largely on how you ignore the slip of her name. Make an issue of it and you bring her back in more bodily form to cope with. The same holds good of those girls the roving eye can't resist.

in Chicago for ten days before her marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Lloyd of Evanston are announcing today the engagement of their daughter, Georgia Brinton, to Lucian Burnham Wilkinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Lawrence Wilkinson, also of Evanston. The engagement was revealed to Miss Lloyd's friends at a tea given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Charles Morgan Price, the former Elinor Rew, at her Evanston home.

Miss Lloyd attended Roycemore school in Evanston and Mount Vernon seminary in Washington, D. C. Mr. Wilkinson prepared at Taft and attended the University of Pennsylvania. His twin brother, Enloe Wilkinson, is in Washington this summer continuing his law studies, but he will return to Evanston in time to be a groomsman for his brother at the wedding in late September.

Society Folk to Attend Ballet Premiere at Fair.

There will be quite a gathering at Merrie England at the Fair tonight for the première of Ruth Pryor and her ballet of Chicago Opera girls at 10:30 p. m. on the village green. Many members of the English club have reserved tables on the terrace of the Red Lion inn to watch the two performances of Miss Pryor and her girls (the second performance will be at 11:30), among them Miss Narcissa Swift, the George B. Harringtons, Ralph Hines, Mrs. Helen Walton, the John Roots, the Kenneth Curtises, and Mrs. Jacob Bischof, who will have among her guests Mr. and Mrs. Warren Bicknell Jr. of Cleveland.

Earlier in the evening there will be several dinner parties at the inn. Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Dawes will be host and hostess, and the William E. Vogelbacks also will entertain, taking their guests later to see "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at the Old Globe theater. The Vogelbacks are giving the dinner for Stanley Chapple of the London Academy of Music and conductor of the London Symphony orchestra. Among their guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Ganz, Mrs. Welch Dickinson, the Reinald Werrenraths, the Louis K. Boysens, the Herbert Witherspoons, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Moorehead, and the I. C. Elstons.

Party Tomorrow for Navy, Army, and Marine Officers.

Officers of the navy, army, and marine contingents stationed at A Century of Progress this summer will be guests at a reception to be given tomorrow afternoon by Rear Admiral Wat T. Cluverius in the Federal building lounge on Northerly Island. Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. Edward J. Kelly, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, Miss Agnes Nestor, Mrs. Carter H. Harrison, Mrs. Charles H. Swift, Mrs. Arthur Leonard, and Mrs. Andrew MacLeish have been invited to serve on the reception committee with Mrs. Rufus C. Dawes. Miss Helen Dawes is gathering a group of young women who will officiate at the tea tables during the hours from 5 until 7 o'clock. They include Miss Barbara Eldridge and her house guest, Miss Cornelia Sage, and Mrs. Chandler Kibbee.

The American Genealogical society has sent out invitations to a dinner Aug. 6 at the Wayside inn in the Colonial village at the World's Fair. Only members of hereditary patriotic societies and Americans of colonial ancestry will receive invitations to the gala affair, which will be the yearly gathering for the society. Only 100 reservations will be accepted. For entertainment there will be a drill by a group of 25 continental soldiers, a minuet in costume by 24 young ladies and an old fashioned Maypole dance. Col. George T. Buckingham, chairman of the board of the society, will be the speaker. Among officers of the organization who will probably be there are: Henry K. Rumsey, president of the Mayflower society; Philip Bell Woodworth, president of the Founders and Patriots of America; Mrs. Julian C. Goodhue, state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution; Col. Bion J. Arnold, vice president of the society, and Charles S. Cutting, honorary president of the society.

Mosaic No. 6.

BY NANCY CABOT.

In the series of mosaic patterns being presented in this department it is difficult to determine which block is the most beautiful. When made in the delicate pastels available today, they have the air of fragility noted in some ancient objects d'art. Arranged on a coverlet, the "Mosaic No. 6" blocks form one large mosaic.

It's ready—Nancy Cabot's new booklet, presenting 96 illustrations of favorite quilt designs, together with one pattern of a popular quilt, "The Framed Rose." Price, 5 cents; by mail, 7 cents. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune; or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices.

BY MARY MEADE.

Summer fondant, guaranteed not to run, stretch, or ease down at the heel, is the thing candy lovers are seeking these moist July days when the mercury plays around in the gay nineties. So far a heatproof, short-cut bonbon, great for hot weather service, we advise this hustler:

Quick Hot Weather Fondant

1¼ cups confectioners' sugar
¾ cup sweetened condensed milk
¼ teaspoon vanilla, lemon, or almond flavoring

Sift the confectioners' sugar until light and fluffy. Work it, a little at a time, into the condensed milk. Add the flavoring — and it's ready to be molded in any of a score of ways your fancy dictates.

For a starter make it nutty in flavor and give it an orange tang thusly:

Orange-Nut Bonbons

Hot weather fondant
Few drops orange extract
Grated orange peel
Confectioners' sugar
Nut meat halves

To part of the hot weather fondant add a very little orange extract and a little grated orange peel. Work in enough confectioners' sugar to balance the moisture of the flavoring and peel. Roll the candy into little balls and press a half nut meat [walnut, pecan, or toasted almond] onto each side of the ball. Arrange the bonbons on waxed paper to dry.

Another part of the fondant mixture is tickled to turn up as—

CHOCOLATE COCONUT MARBLES.

Work shredded coconut and a little dry cocoa into part of the hot weather fondant. Roll it into half inch "marbles" and toss these lightly in more toasted coconut. Dry them on waxed paper.

Or for variety make

PEANUT PATTIES.

Use vanilla flavored fondant for these candies. By dusting the finger tips with confectioners' sugar you may readily form the mixture into flat little patties. Lay these in a bed of coarsely chopped peanuts, first on one side and then on the other. Then lift the candies to a waxed paper to dry.

Still another stunt to play on summer bonbons flatters them with fruit. Into part of the candy work finely chopped candied cherries, crystalized orange peel, or minced dates and raisins. And if you don't always net even results from the pinch-off system of making bonbons try this: Roll each variety of glorified fondant into a bar about ¾ inch thick. Chill it until firm, then cut off even slices, which may be formed into any shape you please.

Also delectable mint candies may come out of summer fondant. It's well in this case to divide the candy into four or five parts before flavoring it. To one section add a few drops of oil of wintergreen or peppermint flavoring. Work in a delicate tint of pink or green with one of the vegetable colorings available in any grocery store. On top of these cool mint bonbons a curl or wiggle of melted dipping chocolate forms a smart, gay touch.

These funny chocolate sprinkles, which come in neat cellophane tubes, are something else again. I love 'em for their warm brown flavor, their crunchiness when they bedeck fondant candies, and also for the fact that they lend the chocolate zest without making necessary the bothersome melting or scraping of the rich brown bars.

Split dates or fat, popped open prunes likewise smile invitingly for fillings of fondant. Press them together, with the candy sunning itself on the split side. Then dip that whiteness into toasted coconut for the final aristocratic note.

Here Are Books Child Will Like in Midsummer

New Boys' Story Combines Science and Adventure.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

After the first flush of the children's vacation delight has worn off, their freedom sometimes grows a little aimless—depending of course upon whether they're in city or country and upon how much is going on. But in any case, whether they're aimless or busy, midsummer heat and leisure make reading a welcome occupation.

It's a grandly luxurious feeling for them to settle down to a good book without a thought of hovering homework or need for clock-watching. So at about this time I always feel it would be helpful to parents and boys and girls to list new or comparatively new books.

A young friend kindly gave me a report on one book that has been on my "current" shelf for several months. He jotted down this about "The Forest of Adventure," by Raymond L. Ditmars (published by Macmillan):

"This book is an exciting adventure story and is full of correct scientific information of the most recent kind. One-third of it takes place aboard the yacht, Oral, which travels through and stops at some of the West Indies, the Virgin islands, and South America, while the other two-thirds is on land, in jungles. The book gives an excellent idea of the fauna of the land visited and traveled through and also of the landscape. The characters are all real and interesting and a touch of humor here and there makes it light reading.

"It is not too scientific or too technical and at the same time it wouldn't seem boring or elementary to a person with a moderate amount of scientific knowledge. It shows how an expedition is conducted and the equipment taken. The three boys that go along liven up the story and are continually getting new surprises and experiences since they take part in everything."

For the younger child who dearly loves animals there is a rich and delightful book called "Sammy and Silverbrand," by Janet Miller (Houghton Mifflin). It is the story of a little boy's life on the edge of the jungle. There is not room today for a full account of the book, but I have notes of this and that about 18 other books for varying ages—books ont on my regular lists.

Kids' Letters to Win Bids to Sally's Party

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Didn't I tell you this week's party announcement would be an unusual one, boys and girls? It's only once in a lifetime that any child has an opportunity of meeting a movie star, and attending a party planned especially by him . . . why, it's almost like visiting in Hollywood!

In case any of you missed the announcement in Sunday's TRIBUNE, I'll repeat the good news. Buddy Rogers has invited me to bring 50 boys and 50 girls to a party to be given in the Bal Tabarin of Hotel Sherman on Wednesday, Aug. 1. He's arranged many kinds of entertainment for us, and will be master of ceremonies. From the Italian village at the Fair will come an organ grinder, and his monkey, Julia; and Pepito, a clown. There'll be two little dancers from the Irish village, and a Punch and Judy show from the same village. We're going to have a grand afternoon. We're keeping some of it as a surprise for you, but I'll tell you now that Frank Bering of the Sherman promises ice cream and cake for everyone, in addition to sending several performers now appearing at the College Inn—famous acrobats, the five Maxellos; "Screwy" Douglas, who'll sing all about the "Boogey Man," and Marion Holmes, a lovely young girl singer. Isn't that nice of him?

Now, here's the way to win an invitation to this party. I want to take the youngsters who'll most enjoy the afternoon, and I can judge that best if you'll write to me, telling why you'd like to be included as one of my guests, what entertainment you think you'll like best, and anything else that will convince me that you should have an invitation. Your letter must have your name, address and age in it, and it must reach me not later than next Thursday.

Don't delay, boys and girls. Write that letter and put it into an envelope addressed to Sally Joy Brown, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

I'll tell you more about our party tomorrow!

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—The Argentine ambassador and Mme. de Espil spent the week-end at the embassy, having come up Friday from Hot Springs. They returned there today for the remainder of the summer.

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the secretary of the interior, has returned to their home on Glennbrook road from a visit in Mexico City. She was the guest there of the American ambassador and Mrs. Josephus Daniels for several weeks.

Lieut. Alan Reed MacCracken, U. S. N., and Mrs. MacCracken have closed their home here and are occupying the summer home of the former's uncle and aunt, Dr. and Mrs. James Brown Scott of Chicago, on the Severn river near Annapolis, for the remainder of the summer.

The Cuban ambassador and Mme. de Marquez Sterling and their son, Manuel de Marquez Sterling Jr., went to the Annapolis Roads club, near Annapolis, for the week-end.

You're playing with FIRE when you play in the SUN
Sunburn is FIREburn . . . just as painful . . . sometimes just as serious as other burns. It is only common sense to use a real burn remedy instead of a cosmetic cream or lotion.
Use Unguentine, the standard burn remedy of hospitals everywhere. It goes as deep as the burn, stops the pain, hastens healthy healing . . . soon turns a sunburn into a tan.

Sleeveless Summer Frocks Demand Velvet Smooth Skin

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Now that summer is with us and we are wearing sleeveless dresses, and in some instances going without stockings, particularly if we have moved to the seashore or are week-ending at our many summer resorts, it is absolutely imperative that we take stock of the superfluous hair situation.

There are several methods of removing unwanted hair. How often you need to repeat the operation depends largely upon the speed with which the hair grows. If there is but a slight growth it may be possible to make it invisible by bleaching. For this purpose peroxide to which a few drops of household ammonia have been added may be used effectively. It bleaches the hair and makes it dry and brittle so it eventually breaks off.

If there is a generous growth of hair, as on the arms, underarms and legs, depilatories may be employed. There is the cream depilatory and the powder and liquid forms which, when applied, seem to destroy the growth so the hair may be washed off with the preparation. Then, there is the wax-like type which pulls the hair out.

In using any of these preparations it is important that you follow directions closely. Used on a normal, healthy skin they are generally harmless. Where irritation occurs after use, cold cream or a talcum powder will be found soothing. Let a few days elapse before applying a second time, as the skin is naturally sensitive after its use.

If you intend to use a deodorant and a hair remover, be sure to use the deodorant first, as the removal of the superfluous hair will make the skin sensitive even though no irritation is apparent.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

One way to make the jaded soul soar on a demoralizingly hot day is to take a sudsy bath, a cold rinse and then treat yourself to an almost smothering shower of the lightest, softest dusting powder in a gentle fragrance. It really works.

There's a new one out that fills all these subtle requirements. It has an indefinable and extremely light fragrance that's comfortingly sweet smelling but won't declare immediate and odorous war on your perfume or any other scent you may adopt. Instead of a name it has, like many of the perfumes of the great French establishment which makes it, a dignified number.

You can't miss it when you're beauty shopping; its round brown and beige box is a knockout. Stunning—and the most practical we've ever found. It has a metal bottom that will foil any water you splash around or those clouds of steam that are part of a bath's fun. You'll never pick it up some morning and have that bottom fall out. And your precious powder will never cake either, even though you turn the bathroom into a veritable Turkish bath. The base of the box is made of cork!

It's a slick setup on all counts. The powder is perfect, the box both practical and beautiful—and even the puff is one of those fat, squashy ones that lend themselves so well to the powder slathering of the whole body.

You'll find this jewel among dusting powders in shops all over town at a price that isn't exhorbitant. One would be a grand gift or bridge prize idea, by the way. ELEANOR NANGLE.

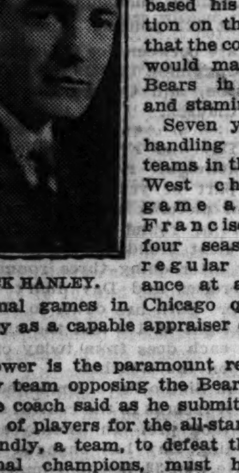
PHILS GET 3 RUNS IN 12TH; DEFEAT CUBS, 6-5

ALL-STARS WILL MATCH BEARS IN POWER—HANLEY

Coach Gives College Team Even Chance.

Coach Dick Hanley of Northwestern said yesterday the college all-star eleven has an even chance of defeating the Chicago Bears at Soldiers' field Aug. 31. Hanley based his prediction on the belief that the collegians would match the Bears in power and stamina.



DICK HANLEY.

Seven years of handling all-star teams in the East-West charity game at San Francisco and four seasons of regular attendance at all professional games in Chicago qualifies Hanley as a capable appraiser of both sides.

"Power is the paramount requisite of any team opposing the Bears," the Purple coach said as he submitted his choice of players for the all-star team. "Secondly, a team, to defeat the professional champions, must have a good passing offensive and specialists capable of maintaining a concerted attack against those spots in which the Bears have proved vulnerable. The all-stars will have this power and the necessary specialists. I believe the outcome will be a great surprise to rabid professional followers."

Passes Will Gain Against Pros.

Hanley prefaced his selection with a report of his unofficial scouting tours to Wrigley field, where he has been an interested spectator at all of the Bears' games. The professional champions revealed conclusively last year, he explained, that a good passing attack would gain repeatedly against them. The New York Giants with Harry Newman, and the Portsmouth Spartans with Glenn Presnell, were outstanding examples of this.

Teams with good tackles also exposed vulnerable spots in the Bears' play, Hanley said. The professionals, however, play smarter football than the collegians have ever faced, and it will be necessary for the all-stars to enter the game with definite, well directed assignments.

Here Are Hanley's Selections.

With these facts before him, Hanley carefully weighed the merits of the college graduates eligible for the contest and named the following men, all of whom he has seen play, as the team which he believes can face the kick-off on a par with the professional title holders:

ENDS—Manske, Northwestern, and Smith, Washington.
TACKLES—Krause, Notre Dame, and Torrance, Louisiana State.
GUARDS—Schammel, Iowa, and Jones, Indiana.
CENTER—Bernard, Michigan.
QUARTER BACK—Masterson, Nebraska.
HALF BACKS—Laws, Iowa, and Everhardus, Michigan.
FULL BACKS—Mikulak, Oregon.

"These men are all big," Hanley said. "They are rough and can stand up under the punishment the Bears inflict. Each man is an expert in his position. Those who will be eligible to catch passes have established themselves as great receivers. Consequently all must be watched. One inferior pass receiver will swing the balance of power to the Bears, for they are too smart to spend an evening trailing a man who cannot catch the ball.

"Krause and Torrance, big, shifty, and rugged tackles, will compare favorably with any the Bears have met, and in Bernard and Mikulak the all-stars will have a second line of defense every bit as good as Miller and Nagurski of the Bears. Bernard is the greatest center I have seen in ten years. Mikulak is a defensive demon. George Sauer of Nebraska, were he able to play, would be my choice for his all around ability.

Manske Is Hanley's Best End.

Hanley called Manske the best end he has ever coached. Smith he placed on a par with any end in the professional league, excepting Hewitt on the latter's showing last year. Jones, Hanley said, was the outstanding

A FOOTBALL SHOWDOWN

For years the old argument has raged—can a high class college eleven beat a good pro team—but nobody has ever done anything about it. The test will come on the evening of Aug. 31 when the best of last season's college football players meet the Chicago Bears, national professional champions, at Soldiers' field.

A genuine all-American eleven, picked by thousands of fans in a nationwide poll, will be sent against a team considered the greatest professional outfit ever assembled.

There are seats available now for this magnificent struggle, but football fans who want the best locations must act promptly. All seats are reserved. Prices are $1.65 and $1.10. Mail check or money order to Football Ticket Manager, Chicago Tribune, Tribune Tower, Chicago.

FIELD OF 87 IS COMPLETED FOR TRIBUNE SWIM

600 in Last Preliminary Tests.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The field of eighty-seven qualifiers for the ten championship 100 yard swimming races at Lincoln park next Sunday afternoon was completed yesterday when twenty-eight boys and girls qualified from the list of 600 contestants in a two hour meet at the Emmett Whealan pool, Milwaukee and Devon avenues. The meet at Emmett Whealan pool was the last of the four sectional trials, a new feature of the 1934 fifth annual TRIBUNE Derbies, and it easily was the largest of the series.

Yesterday's meet also brought out some of the fastest swimmers and the finals Sunday at Diversey beach promise to exceed all other events of its kind. The championships, five for boys and five for girls, will climax the swimming meet and they also will be part of THE TRIBUNE'S regatta, which will include crew races, canoe races, contests between cutter crews, and exhibitions of fancy diving.

Percentage Is High.

An idea of the number of youngsters interested in winning TRIBUNE merit buttons may be gained from the fact that sixty-nine boys, 11 and 12 years of age, reported in class A at Emmett Whealan pool. Eighty-six were entered in this division. The percentage reporting was equally high in other classes and established an all time mark for the five years of the meet.

Lucky boys in class A who received qualifying medals yesterday were Robert Amundsen, Ed Kenpanowski, and Pat Whealan. Amundsen swam 100 yards in 1:18.1 for the best mark in the trials and then won the semi-final race in 1:17.3.

Two boys from out of Chicago qualified in class B, Leo Hartman of Waukegan and Filipp Kreissl of Evanston. Adolph Keifer, former Roosevelt High school swimmer, now competing for the Lake Shore A. C., swam his semi-final race in 57 5-10 seconds in class C, which will be difficult to beat in the finals next Sunday.

Highland Park Girls Win.

Two Highland Park, Ill., girls, Margaret Johnston, class A, and Katharine Johnston, class D, reached the championship finals. Swimmers from the Beilfuss natatorium, Community Recreation center, and the J. P. I. also figured prominently in the trials.

Marlys Lapin, one of last year's champions, who was forced to enter class E for girls 19 years of age and over by the rules of the meet, succeeded in qualifying in this division regardless of the age handicap. Marlys won the semi-final with Charlotte Jackson of Bloomington, Ill., a close second.

Because of the large number of entries the start of the races was delayed until 2:30 yesterday, but the events were completed in two hours by the efficient work of the score of clerks, timers, judges, and starters.

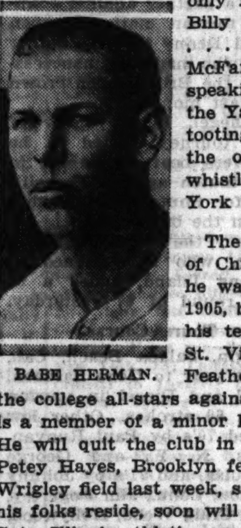
Talking It Over

BY ARCH WARD.

THE CUBS carry 74 bats and seven fungo sticks. . . . Though there are more than three bats to a player, three or four members of the team for long stretches use the same club. . . . As few as five bats have been used in one game, but the whole assortment is laid out every day. . . . Babe Herman buys his bats by the dozen. . . . He says he found eight good ones in the dozen with which he opened the season and that Billy Herman broke all eight of them. . . . He ordered another dozen and only four of them have suited the Babe. . . . So far Billy Herman hasn't broken any of the second batch. . . . Sam Pian, manager of Barney Ross, and Packey McFarland, Illinois athletic commissioner, are not on speaking terms. . . . Baseball writers traveling with the Yankees amuse themselves daily in the press coop by tooting on shrill police whistles. . . . At Comiskey park the other day radio announcers complained that the whistles interfered with their work. . . . So the New York boys blew that much harder. . . .



BABE HERMAN.

The Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, senior auxiliary bishop of Chicago, pitched a no-hit game against Illinois when he was the leading moundsman for St. Viator college in 1905, but he lost the decision, 1 to 0, due to the collapse of his team's defense. . . . He was quarter back on the St. Viator football team for three years. . . . Beattie Feathers, Tennessee's great half back who will play with the college all-stars against the Bears at Soldiers' field the night of Aug. 31, is a member of a minor league baseball team at Pennington Gap, Va. . . . He will quit the club in time to join the football squad on Aug. 15. . . . Petey Hayes, Brooklyn featherweight who gave Leo Rodak a hard fight at Wrigley field last week, says the farm near Saugerties, N. Y., where he and his folks reside, soon will be paid in full. . . . The middle name of George Getz, Illinois athletic commissioner, is Fulmer, after an old family physician.

Purdue insists that its basketball game with Notre Dame be played in early December, while Notre Dame's basketball-football men, including Marty Peters, Johnny Allen, Don Elser, and Don Allen, are still on the coast with the gridiron squad. . . . George [Kid] Lavigne, who claimed the lightweight championship in 1893, did no boxing when he was preparing for his bouts. . . . He got into condition by road work and by shadow boxing on the sand. . . . Barney Cosneck, 165 pound wrestling champion of the Big Ten in his sophomore year at Illinois, and heavyweight champion as a senior last season, has turned professional. . . . He has had more than 30 matches without suffering a defeat. . . . He is managed by Tony Stecher, brother of Joe, the old scissors king. . . .

Pat Pieper, announcer at Wrigley field, received the first announcer's license after boxing was legalized in Illinois. . . . Johnny Revolta, who won the St. Paul open golf playoff, has an excellent use for the $835 he earned for so doing. . . . The reason is a new member of the Revolta household, about a month old. . . . Jimmy Foxx and Max Carey will conduct a baseball school at Miami next winter. . . . It may give the White Sox fans some consolation to recollect that the Phillies haven't won a pennant since 1915. . . . Eddie Baldwin, umpire in the Chicago Semi-Pro league, is a mounted policeman on Randolph street during the week. . . . The new lightweight ball adopted by the United States Table Tennis association weighs between 37 and 39 grains. . . . Harry Kaskey, member of the 1924 and 1928 Olympic skating teams, is directing a band at the Schlitz Palm garden at the Fair.

Ten Years Ago Today—Margaret Spangler won the $25,000 Grand Circuit Pacing Derby at Kalamazoo, Mich. . . . Ben Carpenter's R class sloop Sari won the annual Mackinac cup race. . . . The Detroit Tigers moved into first place by defeating the Yankees, 3 to 1. . . . K. M. Landis officially approved the proposed White Sox-Giants tour of Europe. . . . Art Sweet's 141 headed the list of qualifiers for the Western Amateur golf tournament. . . . Jack Dempsey was injured painfully when his automobile overturned in a ditch near Los Angeles.

NELSON VICTOR IN MARATHON SWIM FOR SECOND TIME

Janet Sheather Victor in Woman's Race.

Marvin Nelson, Fort Dodge, Ia., distance swimmer, won the 15 mile marathon swim from the 79th street beach to the World's Fair lagoon yesterday. Nelson, who also won the event last year, finished in 7 hours 54 minutes 5 seconds, and took down first prize of $5,000.

Frank Pritchard, Buffalo, N. Y., was second in 8:08:41, and received $1,500 of the prize money. Giani Gambi, whose home is in Ravenna, Italy, came in third. His time was 8:24:31, and he received $700.

Nelson Is Fourth.

A Chicago boy, Cy Nelson of the Lake Shore Athletic club, was right behind the Italian, finishing in fourth place in 8:27:10, earning $500. Eli Radakovich, Duquesne, Pa., came next in 8:39:22, receiving $200, and Toby Tobin, 16 year old Los Angeles youth, ended the swim in 9:02:45. Besides his prize of $100 Tobin was offered and accepted a position with one of the motor companies exhibiting at the Fair. The youngster's effort against the veteran distance swimmers caught the spectators' fancy, and they lingered long after the leaders had finished to greet Tobin.

Alec Sorozen, New Toronto, Ont., was the only other finisher in the starting field of 65. Sorozen, however, did not share in the prize money. A strong surface current slowed up the competitors.

Canadian Girl Wins.

Janet Sheather, 21 years old, Port Credit, Ont., former member of the Canadian Olympic swimming team, won the women's five mile race and with it first prize of $1,000. She was timed at 2 hours 10 seconds.

May Looney of Toronto, was second and won $500, and another Toronto swimmer, Lucy Spence, took the $300 third prize. Eva Bein of New York, was fourth, winning $150, and Evelyn Armstrong of Detroit, fifth, winning $50.

Lott, Stoefen to Play Quist and Crawford

WIMBLEDON, England, July 22.—(AP)—Gloom settled over the American Davis cup tennis camp today as George Lott and Lester Stoefen prepared to do or die tomorrow in the all but hopeless effort to pull out an interzone final victory over the Australians.

The new doubles combination, American champions, meets Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist in the third match of the series that will determine Britain's challenger for the cup, and the odds for the one day rest with the Americans.

Ready for Anything.

So startlingly powerful was the play of Crawford, rated second only to Fred Perry, England, among the world stars, and 21 year old Vivian McGrath in sweeping through both singles on the opening day, that Americans who came here to root and exult now are prepared for anything.

Crawford beat Frank Shields in straight sets, and McGrath won from Sidney B. Wood in four. Needing one more victory, Australia seems certain to get it when Crawford meets Wood in resumption of the singles Tuesday. On the basis of his play against Wood, there is every indication that McGrath can handle the swift but erratic blasts of the Shields.

No Tennis on Sunday.

There is no tennis in England on the Sabbath, so the American camp was quiet. The pall, in fact, was almost deathly, as though the end already had come. The nonplaying captain, Dick Williams, had expected an even break on the first day's play.

Officially, Williams kept his spirits up and refused to concede defeat, though he no longer felt able to predict victory. He was content to stand on his remarks following Saturday's slaughter, "Well, at least we've seen the best they'll ever play."

Yankees Turn Big Gun on Sox; Win Twice, 8-2; 15-2

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The big hearted White Sox exhibited their cousin act again yesterday and it was great for the Yankees but not so good for 15,000 spectators, many of whom walked out on the party. The tail-enders gave the second placers a nudge back toward the league lead by dropping a double header, 8 to 2 and 15 to 2. It was the twelfth time the Sox have been of help to the Yanks in 15 chances.

BABE RUTH.

All the unhappiness in the first game was heaped on old Ted Lyons, who didn't have much more than willingness to work. The Yanks had no respect for that. Ted was down for the count as early as the first inning and was down again in the second.

The Babe Belts One.

In the latter Mr. George Herman Babe Ruth, just back from a brief vacation, exercised his talents by hitting home run No. 16 with two mates on base. Later he drove in another run by singling and then in the sixth he quit for the day. The excuse was that his injured leg was acting up.

The second game was a miserable flop because George Earnshaw exceeded all expectations for feebleness. He was slapped so boisterously right at the start that four runs slipped home, three of them on a homer by Sammy Byrd. This start was just a Yankee method of warming up for bigger things. The big things came in the fourth when Earnshaw and his rescuer Phil Gallivan suffered to the extent of six runs. Gallivan also had his troubles in subsequent innings. Meanwhile the Sox were doing as little against Johnny Deshong as they did against Johnny Allen in the first rout.

FIRST GAME

Lyon's worries began as soon as he started to pitch. Combs opened the long afternoon by beating out a hit to Dykes. Saltzgaver fouled to Hopkins and the ancient Mr. Ruth was walked. He was immediately

In the Wake of the News

SY SANBORN.

IRVING E. [SY] SANBORN, whose tragic death occurred last Wednesday at his home in Canandaigua, N. Y., was one of Chicago's baseball writers close to the councils of Ban Johnson and Charles A. Comiskey when the American league was making its fight against the National league for major, instead of minor, ranking. That purpose was accomplished by the peace agreement of 1903.

Associated with Sanborn, who wrote for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, then and in the years immediately following was an interesting group of fellow scribes, many of whom later left newspaper work for success in business enterprises. Sanborn, or Sandy, as most of us knew him, was recognized as our authority on rules and baseball law, taking keen interest in technical rulings and also in baseball politics as played by the club owners, then far more important than now.

Let memory recall some of those writers. Closest to Sanborn, perhaps, was Carl M. Green, later business manager of the Boston Red Sox, and finally senior partner of the advertising firm of Green, Fulton & Cunningham in this city. He retired several years ago and lives in Pasadena, Cal. Another was Mark W. Cresap, now head of Hart, Schaffner & Marx. Jesse F. Matteson also became an advertising man, firm name of Matteson, Fogarty & Jordan. He recently retired.

Others were Jack Tanner, dead for many years; Peter D. Vroom, now of the Pullman company; Ed W. Smith, living in Los Angeles; Hugh S. Fullerton, Gus W. Axelson [dead], James Crusinberry, Charles Dryden [dead], Duke Hutchinson, George Rice, Jimmy Gilruth, and The Wake. The late William Veeck, president of the Cubs afterward, was a local news reporter, going into baseball several years later.

Charles Dryden, one of baseball's greatest humorists, was in Philadelphia at this time, but later was associated with Sanborn on THE TRIBUNE.

If Dryden were alive and reporting baseball today he would prefer to be with the White Sox rather than the Cubs, because he liked a loser, more adapted to his pungent shafts which, however, seldom left a wound resented by the players.

Hugh Fullerton, long with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE as a baseball writer and in important editorial department positions, had a penchant for figures. His predictions, based on mathematical percentages, or supposed percentages, long had a vogue. He called, in advance, almost the exact lineups and scores of the White Sox-Cubs world series of 1906. It was rejected by the then sports editor as too radical, the Cubs being strong favorites, but published afterward with a foreword of apology. Finally tiring of the big time in New York, where he went from Chicago, Hugh resigned, rested a bit and now is with a Columbus, O., paper. His son, Hugh Jr., is a sports writer in the east.

Crusinberry, Hutchinson, Rice, and Gilruth are engaged in business in Chicago, although not now on daily newspapers.

Baseball reporting has changed much in thirty years. Except for the avowed humorists, reports of games were serious narratives of what happened without the lighter touches of present day writing. Fans, too, took their baseball more seriously, were more fanatical in team loyalty. Dryden at the end of the season always rushed down to his home in Ocean Springs, Miss., before the world series because he claimed fans resented his lighter treatment of their big event. He would sign no contract which did not contain that permission.

Sanborn was among the most serious of the writers of the period which included Joe Vila, John B. [Jack] Foster, Sid Mercer in New York, Harry Weldon in Cincinnati, Ed Wray in St. Louis, Henry Edwards of Cleveland [now with American league headquarters here], and others too numerous to mention.

To Sanborn baseball was an institution whose integrity and conduct were of surpassing importance. The White Sox world series scandal of 1919 was a terrific shock to him. He retired only a few years thereafter. He served baseball and his baseball readers honestly and conscientiously for his more than 20 years' service with THE TRIBUNE, and for several years thereafter as chairman of the committee making the most valuable player awards.

All these old timers mentioned who are still surviving will join The Wake in regretting the passing of Sy Sanborn, our esteemed former co-worker.

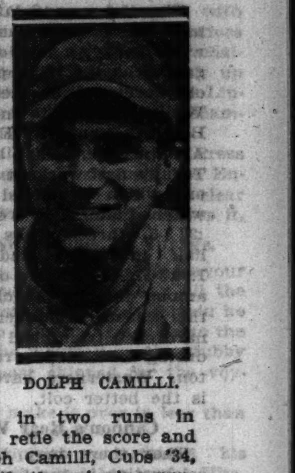
HARTNETT HITS HOMER WITH ONE ON BEFORE ROUT

Root Blows Up in Pinch.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., July 22.—The Cubs, who played their first Sunday game in history in Philadelphia today, will remember it as one of the saddest Sabbaths in their careers. The lads took a licking that was a licking, a 6 to 5 plastering laid on prettily after Gabby Hartnett had knocked a home run in the first half of the 12th inning to break a 3 to 3 tie, which had been effected in the eighth. A double by Gink Hendrick, Cubs '33, drove in two runs in the home 12th to retie the score and a double by Dolph Camilli, Cubs '34, drove in Gink with the winning run.



DOLPH CAMILLI.

It was distinctly a Cub alumni day. In the first place Snipe Hansen, a cast-off of four years' standing, so completely outpitched Lon Warneke in the first six innings that it was startling in view of the respective reputations of the two gents. And another cast-off, Johnny Moore, put the Phillies ahead when he nicked Warneke for a homer with one on in the fourth.

Root Sticks Out His Chin.

Charley Root was the losing pitcher. He pitched well for five innings after Warneke had staggered out of the picture with a record of nine hits off his delivery in six innings.

You can, if you care to, read what transpired in the innings prior to the hot and cold twelfth. Here's where we tell you what happened in both ends of the twelfth.

Stainback led off with a single to left and was forced by Babe Herman, who attempted to sacrifice. Cuyler forced Babe Herman. Hartnett then ran the count to three and two against Curt Davis, back in the game after working nine heartbreaking innings in the first game of yesterday's double-header. On the next pitch Gabby socked his fourteenth home run of the year high over the screen in right center. Cuyler trotted around ahead of Gabby and the Cubs, who had been pretty sick many times during the afternoon, again appeared robust, healthy, and heroic.

Davis, facing two defeats in two days to mar his elegant record of having won 12 games for a team like the Phillies, pitched to Grimm in a resigned sort of way, and Charley slapped a single off the right field wall. Then Charley went to second on a passed ball. No one cared much when Hack was thrown out.

Something Goes Wrong.

No one can guess what happened to Root during the pitching recess between the eleventh and twelfth innings. Root never had appeared better than he did in the seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh innings. His control was especially impressive. He hadn't come close to walking a batsman.

In the home twelfth Andy High batted for C. Davis and walked. Then he hit Bartell a trifle under the Adam's apple. Dick collapsed in front of the plate, but eventually revived and went to first. Chiozza attempted to bunt and forced High at third.

It began to appear as if the Cubs would get out of the woods without more than one run being scored. Hendrick, who had got the ball out of the infield only once in 12 trips to the plate in the first three games of the series and who had been benched therefor, was sent up to bat for Allen. Gink dropped a Texas league dou-

FUTURITY SHAPES UP AS BATTLE OF EAST AND WEST

$60,000 Arlington Race Tests 2 Year Olds.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Some insight as to the qualities of the turf champion of tomorrow will be revealed here on Saturday when the third running of the Arlington Futurity, worth about $60,000, closes the Arlington Park Jocky club annual summer meeting.

As a score or more of candidates for the rich race warmed up for the final training trials yesterday, the Futurity shaped up as the best balanced east versus west struggle that has come up this year in America.

Such powerful eastern stables as those maintained by Cornelius Vanderbilt Whiteney, William R. Coe, Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloan, and Silas H. Mason will send their star juveniles out against the speediest that can be mustered by Brownell Combs, Dixiana, Jack Howard, Elmer Dale Shaffer, Mrs. Roy Carruthers, J. and H. Scheitler, John Marsch, John J. Coughlin, Thomas C. Worden, and Milky Way farms.

The three candidates about which most of the talk centered last night were Today, a son of Whichone, regarded as the most promising 2 year old developed in the famous V. C. Whitney stable in many seasons, St. Bernard, owned by E. D. Shaffer and Albuquerque, owned by Jack Howard. Today's first workout at Arlington was one which impressed everybody that watched him. He went a quarter in :22 3-5, three-eighths in :34 3-5, the half in :47 3-5 and five-eights in 1:00 3-5. It was the outstanding work among the 2 year olds at Arlington this season. Albuquerque and St. Bernard each triumphed in brilliant style during last week's racing at Arlington. Westerners hardly know which is the better colt.

Cannon's Roar Works Well.

That there may be reason for a celebration in the first ward after the running of the Futurity was indicated yesterday when Cannon's Roar, a son of Man O'War which races for Alderman Coughlin, engaged in a fine speed test. He was asked to go 5½ furlongs. He went the quarter in :23¼, the half in :47 3-5 and the 5½ furlongs in 1:07.

Cannon's Roar is to race today with a band of futurity eligibles including Mrs. John Hertz's Conte, C. V. Whitney's Blackmail, and the Milky Way farm stables Gallaclay. There will be another test for futurity eligibles tomorrow and it is possible a star which will become a dangerous futurity threat will come out of either today or tomorrow's races.

Second Richest Race in U. S.

This will be the third running of the Futurity at Arlington. It is the second richest race to be run this year in America. The Futurity replaced the Post and Paddock stakes on the Arlington program in 1932 and was won that year by Ladysman. Last year Far Star, fast running filly from Dixiana stable beat Hadagal, Singing Wood, and other star youngsters in the race.

Entries for the Futurity closed last Sept. 6 and drew 457 nominations at the original payment of $10 for each nomination. There have been two additional payments on those still eligible for the race and there will be a starting fee of $1,000 on Saturday afternoon. These additional payments and starting fees added to the $25,000 which the Arlington Jocky club offers will boost the total value of the purse to about $60,000.

If the Mouse's Tail Says "S," Horse Is Doped

Philadelphia, Pa., July 22.—(AP)—The waving of a mouse's tail may determine the "doping" of race horses.

Dr. James C. Munch, head of the research department of the Temple university school of pharmacy, announced the result of his investigation of the drugging of animals before a race, and received inquiries from racing commissioners of several states.

In studying the action of the drugs most commonly used for doping horses, Dr. Munch found that the injection of small amounts under the skin of white mice would cause the mouse's tail to curve over its back in an S-shape.

The tests are made by injecting small portions of the saliva of the suspected horse into the body of the mouse.

One three-millionth of an ounce of a drug is sufficient to obtain a positive response. Already, Dr. Munch asserted, several cases of doped horses have been exposed by the method.

Millions of Cats Menace Birds in U. S.

BY BOB BECKER.

Nearly 120,000,000 cats are in the United States today! This huge figure on our cat population is based on an estimate given by Nature magazine, which broadcasts a call to bird lovers to do something about the large number of half-wild felines which are roving the countryside, killing song birds.

According to ornithologists and conservation departments, the public has no conception either of the large number of cats [many of them homeless] in this country and the heavy toll of bird life these animals take each year.

Cat Kills Fifty Birds in Year.

If our memory is correct, it was John Burroughs who once said that the average semi-wild cat, having no home and therefore hunting constantly for food, accounts for the deaths of 50 song birds every year. Maybe that statement is a bit strong, but there is no denying the fact that the uncared for felines are efficient bird hunters.

The average bird fan has little or no quarrel with owners of cats who look after them, feed them properly and do not permit the pets to roam the neighborhood for hours at a time. Although even some of these felines make trouble by raiding bird nests and killing the young [we have seen that happen in our neighborhood] the greatest number of bird killings are charged against the homeless, vagrant felines which have to live by their wits and their claws.

States Start Action.

It is against these millions of cats that several states have swung into action with extermination campaigns. The middle west has been slow to curb this hunting cat population, although several eastern states have been active for some time in this respect.

Large cities always house a number of stray dogs. But they invariably have a big roving cat population prowling in alleys, raiding garbage cans and generally making nuisances of themselves. Many of them are gaunt and thin. The humane and the healthful thing to do would be to decimate the ranks of these derelicts, most of them abandoned by their owners.

Why Not Cat Catchers?

The dogs are taken to a very efficiently run dog pound, where some are reclaimed by owners. However, thousands are distributed to medical laboratories [at the taxpayers' expense]. It has been suggested that our dog catchers might find it worthwhile, from humane and health standpoints, to swing their nets at the large number of homeless, prowling cats during part of the year.

JACKIE SHARKEY AND RIGHTMEIER BATTLE TONIGHT

Meet in Windup Bout at White City.

Professional boxing shows will be presented tonight at Marigold Gardens, Broadway and Grace street, and at White City, 63d street and South Park avenue.

Jacquotte Elverrillo, south side boxer, substituting for Sherald Kennard, and Tommy Corbett, Omaha 138 pounder, meet in the eight round main event at Marigold. Jackie Sharkey and Everett [Young] Rightmeier, featherweight rivals, are matched for eight rounds at White City.

Elverillo earned the match with Corbett when he whipped Kenard at Wrigley field last week. Other matches:

Young Jack Blackburn vs. Gene Nelson [4], 147.
Joey Esposito vs. Eddie Chinski [4], 138.
Al Soukup vs. Augie Mandell [4], 128.
Bill Brooks vs. Ralph Garibaldi [wrestling].

Rightmeier is expected to receive his hardest Chicago test against Sharkey at White City. Both have whipped Sammy Mosco in recent weeks.

The most attractive of the five supporting bouts will bring together Mosco and Jimmy Eliopoulos in a six rounder at 122 pounds. Four round matches are between Joe O'Signac and Nestor Bruggman, Ray Borce and Eddie Jackson, and George Engel and Georgie Clausen.

Davy Day and Frank Sigilio, west side lightweight rivals, spent the greater part of yesterday afternoon posing for pictures in lieu of training for their 10 round match at Mills stadium next Monday. Sigilio called it a day after doing three rounds of light exercises and Day didn't even loosen up. Both are down to the required weight of 138 and the amount of work each does from today on depends upon the weather.

Day and Sigilio have completed two of the best records in the central states since turning pro. In three years of campaigning Day has engaged in 36 bouts. He won 33, lost to Tommy Corbett and Sammy Levine, and fought a draw with Paul Dazzo. Sigilio fought his first pro encounter a year ago last May. He scored 16 victories before being held to a draw by Corbett. In his last start he knocked out Pete Nebo for his 17th triumph in 18 bouts. Records of both fighters since the start of the year follow:

DAY—Danny Rosen, knockout [4]; Tommy Corbett, lost [6]; Patsy Burke, won [6]; Gus Vegas, knockout [1]; Kenneth Reed, knockout [1]; George Engel, technical knockout [7]; Frank Marchese, won [6]; Joey Kleko, knockout [5]; Stanislaus Loayza, knockout [8].

SIGILIO—Harry Booker, knockout [2]; Young Terry, knockout [4]; Midget Mike O'Dowd, knockout [1]; Joey Kaufman, knockout [2]; Tommy Corbett, drew [8]; Pete Nebo, knockout [8].

The heavyweight wrestling championship bout between Champion Jim Londos and Ed [Stranger] Lewis, proposed for Soldiers' field this summer, is expected to be closed today at the Illinois athletic commission. Two weeks ago, Joe Foley, general manager of the Chicago Stadium Operating company, offered Ed White, manager of Londos, a guarantee of $40,000 or a privilege of 40 per cent of the net gate receipts for the match.

At the time White expressed the belief that it was insufficient and suggested that other promoters be given a chance to bid, the bids to be made public at today's meeting of the board and the highest bidder to be given the match.

Lewis already has signed a blank contract and it is in the hands of Chairman Joe Triner of the commission. The promoter whose bid is satisfactory to White is to be awarded a Londos contract and the Lewis agreement, which calls for only training expenses of approximately $1,500. Londos' manager hopes to find a bid of $60,000 at the commission.

Frankie Knauer, Eagle River, Wis., welterweight, will be in quest of his 22d triumph in 26 pro starts when he opposes Billy Celebron of Rockford, Ill., in an eight round bout at Western stadium tomorrow. Kneuer, 1931 Central A. A. U. and Wisconsin Golden Gloves 147 pound champion, won 21, lost 3, and fought a draw since turning professional two years ago. Johnny Phagan, who went on to win the international Golden Gloves title, was awarded a four round decision over Knauer in the Tournament of Champions at the Coliseum.

GIANTS DEFEAT REDS ON O'DOUL'S HIT IN 11TH, 2-1

Single Ends Mound Duel of Fitzsimmons, Frey.

New York, July 22.—(AP)—Big Fred Fitzsimmons had to go a long, arduous route today to gain his seventh straight victory, but he finally succeeded in outlasting Benny Frey to give the Giants a 2 to 1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. It was Fitzsimmons' thirteenth triumph of the season.

Joe Moore scored both Giant runs and did practically all the hitting for the league leaders. He gathered in four of their seven safeties off Frey, including the only extra base hit of the game. In the first inning he cracked a double and scored as Hughey Critz grounded out and Manager Bill Terry socked a long fly. Moore scored the winning run in the eleventh when he singled and took second on Critz's sacrifice. Frank O'Doul brought him home with a single after two were out.

DODGERS TAKE PAIR.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 22.—(AP)—The Dodgers won a pair of games from Pittsburgh's Pirates today, 3 to 2 and 13 to 10, and gained a clean sweep of the four game series. The four games represented Brooklyn's longest winning streak of the season.

Although Larry French allowed only four hits, he was beaten by Johnny Babich in the first game, when the latter had only one bad inning. In the second clash the Dodgers pounded Ed Holley and Waite Hoyt for ten runs and as many hits in the second inning, then barely staggered through when Pittsburgh scored seven times in the ninth. CARDINALS WIN PAIR.

Boston, Mass., July 22.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals took a double header from the Braves, 5 to 4 and 4 to 2, today to make a clean sweep of their five game series.

Boston errors and timely hitting by the Red Birds were responsible for the result in both contests. Dazzy Vance pitched the second game for the Cardinals, it being the first time this year he went the route. He allowed only seven hits and struck out five. When he fanned Wally Berger in the eighth, it was the 2,000th strikeout recorded in the hurler's major league career.

Berger made a home run in each game to boost his total to 23. His homer in the second game along with a similar wallop by Pinky Whitney, gave the Braves their only runs. Scores:

Senators Halt Browns' String at Seven, 6-4

St. Louis, Mo., July 22.—(AP)—Behind the pitching of Ed Linke, the Washington Senators this afternoon defeated the St. Louis Browns, 6 to 4, for their only victory of the series.

The Senators, leading 6 to 2 after the fifth, successfully turned back a serious ninth inning threat which started with a home run by Campbell and a double by Melillo that turned in a run on a long fly by Strange. Two successive outs, however, ended the game.

Phillies Beat Cubs, 6 to 5, in Twelve Innings

ble half way between third and Stainback's post and to aggravate matters the ball took a crooked bounce when it came down. Bartell and Chiozza were home with the tying runs before the ball could be dispatched to the plate.

The Payoff.

Johnny Moore was given an intentional pass and then Roy Joiner was sent in to pitch to his old coast league rival and Cub mate, Camilli. If Joiner had anything on the ball, Dolph failed to notice it, for he lined as wicked a drive as you ever saw for the roof of the scoreboard in right center. Old Gink rode home and that was the end of the Cubs' first Sunday of labor in Philadelphia.

The Cubs ran to their train wondering why anybody would want to nullify a blue law that had been in good standing from 1784 till 1934.

Johnny Comes Marchin' Home.

Allen led off the fourth inning with the fourth hit off Warneke and scored ahead of Moore when Johnny knocked his second homer in two games, a high shot over the right field screen. Camilli flied to Klein. Then G. Davis walked, Haslin lined to Klein and Todd fanned.

Hansen, who probably is the worst batter in the major leagues, opened the home fifth with a single to right and stopped at second when Bartell delivered his third straight hit, a line single to left. Chiozza attempted to sacrifice, but forced Hansen at third. Warneke to Hack. Allen bounced a single off Hack's glove, Bartell scoring and Chiozza reaching third, but Allen was out when he tried to reach second, English to Billy Herman.

Cuyler got the seventh under way with a single to center. Hartnett lined to G. Davis. Grimm knocked a double play ball to Bartell, but in his eagerness to function as the middleman Chiozza dropped Bartell's toss, Cuyler reaching third and Grimm first. Cuyler scored and Grimm took second while Chiozza was throwing out Hack. Stephenson batted for Warneke and lifted an easy fly to Bartell.

Root went in to pitch the seventh and Bartell was retired for the first time in the game. Chiozza flied to Billy Herman, then Allen knocked the tenth Philly hit, a single to center. Bill Herman threw out Moore. It also was the first time that Johnny had been retired in the game.

Billy Herman opened the eighth with a single off the right field screen and moved to second on English's sacrifice. Klein walked and Stainback ran for him. Babe Herman knocked Hansen's first pitch for a single to right, scoring Billy Herman with the tying run, Stainback reaching third. Curt Davis, who lost a tough decision to Weaven in the first game of yesterday's double header, relieved Hansen. Cuyler got credit for a hit when Camilli got his bouncer and loked around too long before tossing to Chiozza at first. This filled the bases. Hartnett popped a high fly to Bartell back of second and Grimm flied to G. Davis.

forced by Gehrig on a tap to Hopkins. Chapman poked a bunt to the right of Lyons and beat it out for a hit, Combs scoring. Lazzeri slapped a single to center, and Gehrig legged it home. Lyons then walked Crosetti, who was forced by Jorgens to close the inning.

Lyons got Allen out of the way in the second before the boys set the stage for Mr. Ruth's potent poke. The preparation included a single to center by Combs and a pass to Saltzgaver. Then the Babe, after looking none too healthy on a couple of strikes, hit his 16th home run into the right upper deck, driving in three runs. To discourage Gehrig from attempting the same thing, Lyons plunked him with a pitched ball. This proved a happy idea, because it made possible a double play on Chapman's grounder to Hopkins.

Sun Helps Sox.

The Yanks were able to get one run home in the fourth. Saltzgaver doubled to right and a single by Ruth scored him. The Sox also broke in with a run in this inning. Conlan opened with a single to right and moved to second on a wild pitch. He hiked to third on Simmons' roller to Allen and home while Crosetti was throwing out Bonura. The sun conspired against the Yanks to give the Sox another run in the fifth. Dykes hoisted a tall fly behind first and it became a bargain double when Lazzeri lost it. Dykes scored on a single by Hopkins.

Lyons was an innocent victim of the two runs with which the Yanks tapered off in the ninth. Chapman singled after two were out and Lazzeri bounced one straight at Dykes, but the manager fumbled. Then Crosetti and Jorgens singled to score the two men.

SECOND GAME

The assault on Earnshaw in the first inning of the second game began with Combs' double to center. Saltzgaver popped out, after which Chapman whistled a triple past Bonura to score Combs. A pass eliminated the Gehrig menace and a pop foul took care of Lazzeri. Then the home run idea broke out in a new spot. Byrd spanked the ball into the left field seats and followed Chapman and Gehrig home. That put Earnshaw four runs in arrears.

The Sox melted the Yank lead in half by frisking a few hits off De Shong in their half. Swanson opened with a single to right, Conlan flied out and Simmons ripped off a single that put Swanson on third. Bonura lifted a tall fly close to the left field line and Combs got his hands around the ball but couldn't hang on. It dropped for a double, Swanson scoring and Simmons stopping at third. Simmons scored on Appling's infield out, after which Dykes fanned. The Sox came up with only two hits from here on.

One Run After Another.

After a two inning truce the Yanks resumed firing in the fourth and six runs, not to mention Earnshaw's departure, resulted. De Shong started the charge with a single to right and Combs did the same. Saltzgaver bunted and Earnshaw fumbled, filling the bases. Chapman's single scored De Shong and Combs. Gehrig tripled to score Saltzgaver and Chapman. Away went Earnshaw. Rescuer Gallivan's first effort was three strikes for Lazzeri. Byrd then singled to score Gehrig and Byrd registered the sixth run on a single by Jorgens.

Gallivan slipped passes to Saltzgaver and Gehrig in the fifth. Lazzeri followed with a single good for a run. Another registered in the sixth on Jorgens' double to Simmons' territory and a single by Combs. There was another in the seventh as the result of Gehrig's double, an error by Appling, and a single by Byrd. The last two in the eighth grew from a single by Combs, a pass to Saltzgaver, a single by Chapman which filled the bases, and a single by Gehrig.

Pat Malone to Face Zachary, Dodgers Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., July 22.—The Cubs left here at 6:14 o'clock for New York, where, for some reason not quite clear, they are billeted for their Brooklyn series each trip. Pat Malone will pitch for the Chicagos, who are expecting to look at Tom Zachary.

Gabby Hartnett lost 14 pounds during yesterday's double header, and Babe Herman, skinny as he appears to be, melted off 10 pounds. The top temperature here yesterday was only 96 degrees, but the Philadelphia humidity is said to be the worst of all the civilized communities on this continent.

Charley Grimm, a native and resident of St. Louis, says he has never suffered from the heat as he did during the Philadelphia visit just ended. And that from a St. Louisan is something.

Just before today's game a group of coal miners from Wilkesbarre, in full regalia, paraded the field. The vanguard carried a big banner which read: "Greetings to Mickey Haslin from his friends and fellow workers of the Lehigh Valley Coal company." Mickey, an infielder on the Phillies, was presented with gifts at the plate after the parade was over.

The scores were 6 to 3 and 11 to 2. Sullivan displayed remarkable control, making only 82 pitches, 14 of which were balls and 40 strikes. Scores:

All-Stars Will Match Bears in Power—Hanley

line man in the East-West game last winter.

In the back field Hanley elected to place Laws of Iowa, the leading candidate for quarter back in the nationwide fan poll, at right half because of his passing ability. Laws is a left handed passer, and Hanley would prefer to give the all-star offense advantage of the Hawkeye's ability in this department, which he believes will be the collegians' chief weapon.

"The Bears' pass defense," he said, "is Red Grange. With Laws throwing the ball accurately with his left hand and Everhardus, at the other half back, firing them right handed, all far enough away from Grange to prevent Red from catching up with the ball until it has been received, the all-stars' aerial attack will be a source of genuine annoyance.

"This also will give the all-stars an opportunity to utilize Masterson's exceptional qualities as a punt handler, blocker, and tackler. Masterson is a big fellow, fast and rugged. He was as responsible for Nebraska's success last year as Sauer. Masterson is a competent field general, but if it is the fans' wish that Laws should direct the team, he can call signals from half back."

KEARNS NAMES TEAM

Nick Kearns, veteran Western conference football official, selected nine Big Ten men on his college all-star team to oppose the Bears at Soldiers' field on Aug. 31. The exceptions were Krueger, the Marquette center, whom Kearns described as just a honey, and Krause of Notre Dame. Kearns picked his eleven from men he has seen play in games in which he officiated. His selection:

Ends—Maneke, Northwestern, and Petoskey, Michigan.
Tackles—Krause, Notre Dame, and Fehring, Purdue.
Center—Krueger, Marquette.
Guards—Schammel, Iowa, and Jones, Indiana.
Quarter back—Laws, Iowa.
Half backs—Cook, Illinois, and Cramer, Ohio State.
Full back—Smith, Wisconsin.

Gil Berry Picks All-Star Eleven; Sees Great Game

Champaign, Ill., July 22.—[Special.]—Gil Berry, one of the best half backs University of Illinois football has developed in recent years, today predicted that the charity game in Chicago Aug. 31 between the 1933 college all-stars and the Bears would be the outstanding sport attraction of 1934.

"I wouldn't miss the game for anything," Berry said. "When you bring together a team like the one that will perform for the colleges anything can happen. The game will be full of excitement."

Only two Big Ten players were included in the all-star lineup the former Illini submitted. They were Bernard of Michigan at center and Manske of Northwestern at end.

"No conference is stronger than our own Big Ten," Berry explained, "but man for man I consider my selections the best I have seen. I choose Montgomery of Columbia for quarter back because of his outstanding generalship and all around play in the Tournament of Roses game last Jan. 1 at Pasadena. He was the difference between victory and defeat for Columbia."

Berry's team:

Ends—Manske, Northwestern, and Smith, Washington.
Tackles—Krause, Notre Dame, and Crawford, Duke.
Guards—Rosenberg, Southern California, and Corbus, Stanford.
Center—Bernard, Michigan.
Quarter back—Montgomery, Columbia.
Half backs—Feathers, Tennessee, and Sebastian, Pittsburgh.
Full back—Sauer, Nebraska.

BRITISH YACHT SAILS TODAY FOR U. S. CUP RACES

Endeavour Made Ready for Rigorous Sea Voyage.

GOSPORT, England, July 22.—(AP)—Its deck littered with hatches and gear, looking like anything but a swift international challenger, T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour will sail for America at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning for the America's cup races off Newport, R. I., in September.

Its stores for the trans-Atlantic voyage, part of the competition a British challenger never has been able to win, were put aboard today and the new crew, signed on after a recent strike of her professional sailors, made ready for the three weeks' voyage.

The previously smart and trim challenger presented an odd sight as it prepared to cross the ocean under its own sails as the cup regulations require. It was a combination of racing hull and shanty boat equipment, with deck houses, hatches, and unsightly gear battened down all over the deck.

Service Is Watchword.

Everything was arranged with an eye toward standing off the rigors of the high seas, and service, rather than beauty was the watchword.

The waterfront was decorated with flags and there were crowds of visitors over the week-end to wish the challenger well in the effort to pick up successfully the quest Sir Thomas Lipton left off in failure with the Shamrock V. in 1930.

Sopwith told the Associated Press today that he intends to sail the Endeavour out of the harbor and clear the Isle of Wight before he leaves it.

Expects No Trouble on Voyage.

He said he expected the Endeavour would have no trouble sailing all the way and to make this more certain he had workmen busy today adding to the yardage of the mainsail on the stubby temporary mast shipped for the voyage.

"It should make it over in less than three weeks," he said.

Tonight Sopwith entertained his amateur crew aboard his yacht Vita, which will accompany the challenger across the sea, and he discussed with them plans for the races starting Sept. 15. He stirred up so much enthusiasm that the crew cowed the Endeavour would win.

"We won't let Sopwith down," one of the crew said.

All the racing gear of the Endeavour has been stowed away aboard the Vita. It has so many sails, including five mainsails, that it took a couple of days just to get the canvas packed. Experts said it has more canvas of unusual design than any other racing yacht ever equipped here.

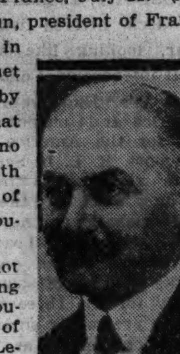
LEBRUN FORBIDS PARTIES TO PUT OUT DOUMERGUE

Will Not Permit Blocking of Recovery.

AURILLAC, France, July 22.—(AP)—Albert F. Lebrun, president of France, took a hand in the bitter cabinet squabble today by warning that there must be no interference with the government of Premier Doumergue.



ALBERT LEBRUN.

France will not tolerate anything which blocks Doumergue's work of restoration, Lebrun said as he unveiled a monument at the birthplace of the martyred president, Paul Doumer.

Lebrun made no direct reference to the cabinet dissension in which Edouard Herriot and André Tardieu, both ministers without portfolio and both former premiers, are the chief figures. But he said pointedly that party fights must be forgotten.

The president expressed pride in Doumergue's "wisdom and prudence," and asserted his work must go on.

"Public opinion will not accept a situation that stops his beneficial work," Lebrun said. "It will be severe toward those who do not do everything to assure for the future what the wisdom of the efforts of today already is permitting us to hope is being achieved."

Meanwhile Premier Doumergue, at Tournefeuille, indicated he may make a quick decision to cut short the present unsettled situation. He said he wished to examine the facts himself at Paris Tuesday and then decide what to do. The cabinet, at a spirited session Saturday, had decided to make him umpire in the dispute.

Observers believed there is still a strong possibility that both Tardieu and Herriot may resign. If they step out the cabinet will remain virtually intact, since neither holds a specific portfolio.

U. S. REFUGEES TELL HOW QUAKE STRUCK PANAMA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PANAMA CITY, July 22.—Ten wives and five children of Americans arrived at Balboa today from quake-stricken Puerto Armuelles, where the second major temblor in five days tumbled scores of houses on their inhabitants. They gave eyewitness accounts of yesterday's disaster. They said practically every building in the little banana town was destroyed.

"We were thrown from bed," one woman said. "Many people were hurled into the streets."

None was killed in the quake, although approximately 150 persons were injured.

President Harmodio Arias and Premier Galileo Solis today flew to the city of David, ruined by a series of quakes. They promised government aid as soon as the shocks cease. WOMAN, 103, DIES; SON WAS SOLDIER IN THE CIVIL WAR

Mrs. Samantha R. Button, believed to have been the only woman living who had a son in the civil war, died in her home yesterday at West McHenry, eleven miles east of Woodstock, at the age of 103 years.

Her son was Clinton Rorer, who at the age of 16 enlisted in Company H, 18th Illinois cavalry, in February, 1864. He died of tuberculosis at Camp Lee and was buried with military honors at West McHenry.

Every birthday Mrs. Button had celebrated since her 100th has been in the nature of a civic celebration in her home town. Relatives, friends and well wishers flocked around her and she gave her views on life for the benefit of the newspapers.

She is survived by eight grandchildren.

SELLING WAVE FORCES STOCK PRICES LOWER

Inflation Fails as a Stimulant.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 22.—Wall street's revival of inflationary psychology, which had been counted upon to get the stock market going in the right direction regardless of the ups and downs of business, suffered a slump last week. A dispatch from Washington to the effect that the government is planning a large federal bond conversion, plus reports of international conversations looking to money stabilization, combined to turn the trick.

Nothing official was forthcoming to substantiate either matter, but, with its nerves jangled as they are by the "New Deal" it has been getting and with its spirits low as they have been for so long by the failure of trade to negotiate any really worthwhile recovery, the street seems ready to lend an ear of credence to almost any bad news that may come its way.

A Sharp Decline.

At any rate the so-called inflation idea was shelved with little ado and the speculative fraternity proceeded to transfer its base of operations pellmell to the selling side of the market. The result was a decline which carried the averages off about 3½ points on the week.

Common shares, ordinarily buoyant on inflation propaganda, especially the golds and silvers, were the chief sufferers on the decline. United States Smelting, leader of the silver group, lost most of the 12 point gain it had run up the preceding week when the possibilities of further inflation by way of giving business a shot in the arm in time for the fall elections was a favorite topic of boardroom conversation.

Rail Shares Suffer.

The rails were freely sold on fears over the new pension law and their poor revenue showings for the last two months. The utilities were influenced to some extent by the contract for the federal government's acquisition of the Knoxville power system and a number of issues were sold on poor earnings figures, one of them being Packard Motor, which went to a new low for the year on its report showing a substantial deficit for the first six months. Whatever benefit the so-called farm stocks, i. e., the implements, mail orders and the like might have received from the upturn in wheat was largely offset by sober reflections on the inevitable effect the widespread crop damage is going to have on the country's buying power and on business generally, disclosure of investment trust liquidation of United Steel stock cost the steels some hard-won ground.

The combined averages closed last night at 82.85, which compares with their low for the year of 78.51 registered on May 14 and their high of 98.27 achieved Feb. 5. On some averages of a wide vogue in the street the rails have broken through their May 14 bottom and the utilities are approximately on their 1934 bottom. The industrial group, however, still has a substantial margin on which to play before violating its all-important low.

Opinion on the important question of whether the heavy selling which overtook the market toward the last of the week represented the opening of a major decline is sharply divided.

PHILLIPS PROFIT PUT AT $2,510,158; HAD LOSS IN 1933

New York, July 22.—[Special.]—The Phillips Petroleum company reports for the six months ended June 30 a net profit of $2,510,158, after taxes, charges, and depreciation, equal to 60 cents a share on 4,154,321 common shares, comparing with a net loss of $5,324,588 in the 1933 period. A net profit of $726,125, or 17 cents a share, was realized in the first quarter of 1934.

Gross income for the six months amounted to $38,265,473, comparing with $23,511,336 in the 1933 period, a gain of 63 per cent. This does not include any intercompany business or gasoline taxes collected and paid to federal and state governments.

The working capital position was greatly improved, Frank Phillips, president, says in his report. The ratio of current assets to current liabilities on June 30 was over 4 to 1, against 1.71 to 1 a year ago. Total debt was reduced $4,657,445 during the period.

As of June 30, total investments, after charging off all known losses, amounted to $272,342,932. A reserve of $134,222,073 has been set up against this investment out of earnings, leaving a net investment of $138,120,859. On the present basis of computing reserves, the present net investment will be retired over a period of about eight and one-half years.

Offer Hundred Million Farm Mortgage Issue

Public offering of $100,000,000 in 3 per cent bonds of the Federal Farm Mortgage corporation is being made today by the secretary of the treasury through the federal reserve banks.

The greater part of the proceeds of the offering will be used to repay advances by the Reconstruction Finance corporation to the federal land banks and to return deposits of public money made in these banks by the treasury, according to W. I. Myers, governor of the Farm Credit administration.

Cash Needs Not Large.

Normal cash requirements of the corporation are not large, relative to its volume of business, he explained, because the bulk of its advances are being made in its government-guaranteed bonds. Eighty-two per cent of the loans made since last March 26 to the federal land banks and the land commissioner have been in this form. More than 350 millions have been poured out through these two channels.

The governor explained, however, that some cash is needed by borrowers to pay taxes, insurance premiums, and other debts for which the denominations of the bonds make them impractical. Disbursements of less than $500 are made in cash.

358 Millions Outstanding.

Corporation 3 per cent bonds now outstanding aggregate $358,264,400—$173,344,400 in the hands of the public. All outstanding issues total more than 500 millions, Mr. Myers said. On July 18, the postal savings system and institutions under supervision of the FCA held $185 millions of the 3 per cent paper, of which 68 million was held as collateral by the treasury. Postal savings had 60 million.

Bids on the latest issue will be received up to 1 p. m. central standard time at the federal reserve banks or their branches, no tenders being received at the treasury department in Washington. The securities will be sold to the highest bidders at not less than par and accrued interest.

Maturity Date 1949.

The bonds are part of a series dated May 15, 1934, maturing May 15, 1949, and redeemable at the option of the corporation on or after May 15, 1944. They are guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States, and will be exempt from all but surtaxes, estate, inheritance, and gift taxes. They will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000, and $10,000.

A 5 per cent deposit must accompany all tenders except those from or guaranteed by incorporated banks, trust companies, and responsible dealers in investment securities. Final payment on all tenders accepted must be made on or before Aug. 1.

PACKERS REPORT JUNE INCREASE IN EMPLOYMENT

The meat packing industry's index of employment was above normal in June and more than twenty-five per cent above the average index of employment for all manufacturing industries, and more than twenty per cent above the index of employment in the packing industry in June, 1933, according to an analysis made by the Institute of American Meat Packers of figures just issued by the United States department of labor.

The institute's statement continues:

"The employment index in the packing industry and the index of payroll totals in the industry have been in excess of the average for all manufacturing industries since September, 1930. The low point in employment and payrolls in all manufacturing industries and in the meat packing industry came in March, 1933. Since that time, the packing industry has increased its employment more than one-third and its payroll totals nearly 60 per cent.

"The index of payroll totals in the packing industry in June was nearly 35 per cent or more than one-third higher than the payroll index for the average of all manufacturing industries. The index of employment showed a gain of five per cent in June, 1934, as compared with the preceding month, whereas the index of payrolls in the industry showed a gain of eight per cent."

EPSTEIN LAUDS RULING OF I. C. C. ON ICE BOX CARS

The ruling of the interstate commerce commission with respect to the handling of refrigerator cars on the railroads was seen last night by Max Epstein, chairman of the board of the General American Transportation corporation, as being "highly beneficial" to private refrigerator car lines and to industry generally.

"The decision is leveled essentially against those shippers who use refrigerator cars for the purpose of obtaining rebates," Mr. Epstein asserted in a statement. "General American services railroads with refrigerator cars as the Pullman company does with passenger cars. The effect of the decision will be to increase this branch of our business."

Mr. Epstein pointed out that of approximately 135,000 refrigerator cars in the United States only about 18,000 are owned by the railroads and therefore the carriers depend on private car lines to supply most of the equipment for shipment of perishables. In return, he said, the carriers, who are thereby relieved of the need of making a tremendous investment in refrigerator cars, pay a stipulated sum per mile to the company for furnishing the cars.

Nearly Billion in Security Issues Approved by U. S.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—(AP)—Nearly a billion dollars in securities issues were found eligible for sale by the federal trade commission in the year ended June 30, 1934. There were 713 issues, valued at $962,856,438. Three hundred and eleven issues were industrials amounting to $225,285,592. Financial issues numbered 186, and were valued at $609,028,666. Other issues totaled 216, valued at $128,542,179.

STEEL DEMAND IN JULY ABOVE EXPECTATIONS

Production Holds at 30 Per Cent.

Demand for steel in July has been better than expected by producers, due to unusually high midsummer production of automobiles, it is stated by the magazine Steel. Output last week remained the same as the preceding week at 30 per cent of productive capacity. In Chicago there was a gain of 3 points to 34 per cent of capacity.

There was also a gain shown in the eastern Pennsylvania area, where production moved up 2½ points to 25 per cent. At Youngstown there was a rise of 1 point to 31 per cent. Pittsburgh and Buffalo remained at 21 per cent and Birmingham at 20 per cent.

Automobile output last week was at the monthly rate of 270,000 cars, but the total for the month is not expected to reach more than 225,000, due to the shutdown over the Fourth of July. General Motors and Chrysler last week placed contracts for a substantial amount of their quarterly needs.

Railroad Buying Negligible.

Railroad purchases have been negligible except for the quarterly distribution of repair material. Next month rail mills will complete rolling 700,000 tons of rails purchased last spring through government financing. Additional car awards are about all that the steel industry expects from the railroads during the remainder of the year. Bids are being taken on 450 subway cars for New York.

Structural shape awards last week dropped 7,738 tons from 33,023 tons in the preceding week. Tonnage placed with mills so far this year is only 17 per cent greater than the comparable period for last year.

Ending of strikes on the Pacific coast will again permit the free flow of steel for construction of the Golden Gate and San Francisco bay bridges, as well as other projects along the coast. Last week the American Institute of Steel Construction rejected the steel fabrication code, principally because the NRA placed erection under the construction code and virtually made this phase of the business a closed union shop.

Disregard President's Invitation.

Steelmakers last week disregarded the President's recent invitation to reduce prices and quoted code prices on bids to the government on miscellaneous tonnages of steel. Producers take the position that the code is a contract, and a reduction, even to the government, would be a violation of the code.

Mill prices on reënforcing steel have not been reduced, but New York distributors have cut prices 10 cents per 100 pounds for random lengths. Cast iron soil pipe prices became so low that the NRA declared an emergency to exist in the industry and ordered producers to raise prices as much as $5 a ton.

Steel's iron and steel price composite last week dropped 4 cents to $34.19, and the finished steel composite is down 10 cents to $54. The iron and steel scrap price is unchanged at $10.29.

MIDWEST HAY CROPS EXPECTED TO BE HALVED

Predictions that crops will run only half of the normal quantity in the main hay-producing states of the drouth-stricken midwest are contained in reports from various sections of the United States and Canada, it was revealed last night. The data was gathered by the National Hay association which will open its 41st annual convention at the Congress hotel today.

In the east, where New York state is ranked as the principal hay producer, fair crops or better are being experienced. California, the No. 1 hay state, has fair crops, but with a large portion made unfit for shipment by rain damage. Illinois is ranked as a minor producer.

The reports were released by Fred K. Sale of Indianapolis, secretary and treasurer of the organization. They were gathered by C. S. Martin of Ashland, O., a director and one of the hay shipping members of the group, from state vice presidents of the asociation.

OVER 5 BILLION U. S. SECURITIES MATURE IN YEAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 22.—Obligations of the United States government which will mature within twelve months amount to $5,143,776,900. They consist of treasury certificates of indebtedness notes, and non-interest bearing discount bills.

The fourth Liberty 4¼s outstanding have been reduced to approximately $4,300,000,000. Of this amount $1,200,000,000, representing two series, has been called for redemption on Oct. 15, but no offer of an exchange for them has yet been made.

The first Liberty 4¼s are not callable until Dec. 15, and then only if notice is given by Sept. 15. This issue is outstanding in the amount of $535,981,600.

The Liberty 3½s, outstanding in the amount of $1,329,226,350, are likewise callable on Dec. 15, and then only if notice is given by Sept. 15. This issue is outstanding in the amount of $535,981,600.

Five Month Gas Revenues 3.1 Pct. Above Year Ago

New York, July 22.—For five months ended May 31 manufactured and natural gas revenues aggregated $326,326,400, an increase of 3.1 per cent over the corresponding period of 1933, the American Gas and Electric association reports.

OVER 1,000 BANKS OPENED IN COUNTRY SINCE JANUARY FIRST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 22.—The number of banks opened in 1934 passed the 1,000 mark last week when the total reopenings and replacement institutions chartered reached 1,020, according to the American Banker. Of the total, 339 were national and 681 were state chartered institutions. During 1933 reopenings totaled 1,500, of which 800 were opened before June 30, 1933.

It is pointed out that after the banking holiday in the spring of 1933 there were 4,811 closed and unlicensed banks, according to federal reserve figures, so that with the openings last year and thus far in 1934 there are still a loss of about 2,300 banks.

The American Banker estimates that with the withdrawal of 188 banks from the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation temporary fund on June 30 there are nearly 1,500 banks fully open in the United States which are not members of the deposit insurance system. The total number of banks open and unrestricted as of June 30, 1934, is estimated at 15,600, of which 14,020 are members of the FDIC.

Of the 1,500 non-member banks of the FDIC 501 are mutual savings banks of the total of 567 of such banks in the country. Most of these non-member banks are located in the New England and middle Atlantic states. The remaining 1,000 of non-FDIC banks are state chartered institutions of which there are 8,600 throughout the country. The matter of joining the FDIC is optional with state banks but is compulsory with federal chartered institutions. The largest block of commercial non-member banks of the FDIC is in the state of Kansas in the number of 323.

BRUNSWICK SIX MONTH SALES RISE 100 PER CENT

A gain of almost 100 per cent in sales for the first six months of 1934 over a year ago is announced by the Brunswick-Balke-Collender company. The total was $2,396,856, against $1,283,905. For the June quarter sales amounted to $1,225,954, compared with $709,496 for the corresponding period last year.

The company reported a loss for the first half-year of $21,131, compared with $402,122 for the first six months of 1933. Loss for the June quarter amounted to $35,683, against $215,574 for the corresponding quarter a year ago.

Plans are being made for an extensive advertising and promotion campaign this fall which is exepected to boost the sale of the major products manufactured, according to Robert F. Bensinger, president of the company.

NATIONAL DAIRY PROFIT REDUCED BY ADDED COSTS

New York, July 22.—(AP)—National Dairy Products corporation reports net profit for the first six months of $4,009,387 after all charges, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to 58 cents a common share. In the first half of 1933 the company earned an equivalent of 76 cents a share on its common stock.

Sales during the period were $129,568,398, compared with $110,464,734 in the first half of 1933. The increase in dollar sales, a statement by the company said, was more than offset by added costs, which reduced the company's earnings to 2.82 per cent of sales, as compared with 4.34 per cent during the same period in 1933.

The company reported that it had noted some improvement in the dairy industry as a whole since last December.

Diners Mutiny Over Archaic Railroad Rule

High temperature sometimes makes the average American business man, usually good natured, easy going, and amenable to official rules no matter how arbitrary, assert himself to a surprising degree—under aggressive leadership.

Frank D. Chase, engineer and architect and former state administrator for the CWA in Illinois, in a trip east recently stepped from his Pullman into a non-air conditioned diner where the temperature was hovering around the century mark. He slipped off his coat and sat down.

The waiter looked startled and the dining car conductor looked annoyed. He hurried up to Mr. Chase.

"Sorry, sir, but you can't take off your coat in a diner," he said apologetically.

"Why not? It's boiling hot in here," replied Mr. Chase, picking up a menu.

"It's against the rules, that's all."

Mr. Chase rose to his feet, made a hasty survey of the car. About 90 per cent of the diners were men—all with coats on and visibly uncomfortable.

"Men," shouted Mr. Chase above the din of the train, "every one take off his coat. Let's be comfortable."

Every man in the car pulled off his coat with a unanimous sigh of relief. Mr. Chase smiled. The dining car conductor looked round the car.

"You win," he said, with a half grin. "I can't make a rule stick with every one against me. Anyway, it's a bum rule on a hot day."

Outside exercise changes the eating habits of even the most urban citizen, the John R. Thompson company has found. A check of its World's Fair restaurants reveals that 12 per cent more meat is consumed by the hungry sightseers than at the firm's loop establishments while the sale of bakery goods is 12 per cent less at the Fair than in town. A surprising apathy for sandwiches is also noted. When time is taken out for food the diner at the Fair insists on a full meal and is less concerned with dainties or light lunches.

It is reported England has shipped to Greensboro, N. C., a heavy duty, coal burning truck for a three months' demonstration to feel out American manufacturers. It is claimed the 120 horse power engine is far more economical than a gasoline powered vehicle. Four pounds of coal, automatically fed, are required to propel the truck a mile. A ton will carry it nearly 600 miles. Another claim for its superiority is that the truck, with trailer attached and carrying a gross load of 25 tons, can start from standstill on a 20 per cent grade.

"And I walked with Mr. Slingsby, of the tower, who was there, and who did in walking inform me mightily in several things; among others, that the heightening or lowering of money is only a cheat, and do good to some particular men, which, if I can but remember how, I am now by him fully convinced of." The venerable Pepys inscribed the foregoing in his famous diary on Oct. 2, 1666.

Chinch bugs have invaded the island at the World's Fair. So reported several farmers who visited there after selling their live stock at the yards and telling traders of the onslaught on crops by the bugs.

"We were not mistaken, although it might be difficult for those who have never seen the bug to positively identify it," said G. B. Morris, one of a group from Stark county, Ill., who said those he saw were as fine a specimen as found on any Illinois farm.

CHICAGO RETAIL TRADE SHOWS LARGE UPTURN IN TOTAL LAST WEEK

Retail activity showed a big gain, wholesale turnover was steady, and conditions in the industrial and utility fields were satisfactory here last week, according to the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Material assistance was given the retailers through response to the Dollar Day sales of the State street stores. Competing sales events of neighborhood and community sales groups also helped to boost the total for the week.

Resumption of the drouth resulted in some slight adverse reactions in the wholesale field, it was reported. Early arrivals of buyers and retailers for the midsummer trade shows and A Century of Progress indicate considerable buying volume starting early in August.

The industrial field found considerable demand for construction and home refurnishing commodities. Local steel units again held a slight edge over competitors in other sections. The usual vacation easing was noticed in the utility field, but volume continues slightly ahead of last year.

ECONOMY GROUP LAUNCHES DRIVE ON U. S. SPENDING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 22.—An active campaign by the National Economy league against further expansion of emergency spending by the federal government, on the ground that such spending will lead to excessive taxes or to printing press inflation, was announced today.

In its annual report, made public by Henry H. Curran, director, following a meeting of the managing committee, the league also called attention to recent "extraordinary" increases in the personnel of the federal government as suggesting a tendency toward burocracy. Other parts of the report reviewed the work done previously by the league in support of reduced payments to veterans.

The league will continue to work for a system which will place "the whole subject of veterans' expenditure on a fair and sound basis," the report declared. The principal emphasis of the document rested, however, on the subject of federal spending.

The report called attention to estimates that the national debt will reach 34 billion dollars by June 30 of next year and stated that President Roosevelt's announced plan of balancing the national budget in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1935, is threatened by a trend toward "more borrowing and more spending."

Cattle Killing Piles Up Huge Hide Surplus

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Slaughter of large numbers of cattle under the Agricultural Adjustment administration's program for extending aid to farmers is causing grave problems in the tanning, shoe manufacturing, and packing industries, according to authorities on the animal hide industry.

The killing of live stock, both to reduce the animals in drouth areas and to reduce surpluses in non-drouth regions, has resulted in huge surpluses of hides being piled up so suddenly that they cannot be disposed of in an orderly manner. The result is that prices are suffering marked declines.

Affects Three Industries.

The upset in the price structure for hides affects the three industries, and indirectly the public, according to one hide broker.

First, the tanning industry is disturbed because of the length of time, from six to nine months, which must be spent on the processing of hides. Hides purchased at higher prices some months ago are coming out of the processing operation in a depressed market. Shoe manufacturers with large stocks on hand refuse to pay higher prices for the finished product when raw hides are selling down.

Second, the shoe manufacturing industry is hesitant to make future commitments when there are wide fluctuations in prices. This industry operates on a seasonal basis and during the dull periods, according to this hide broker, makes few purchases of finished hides. The purchase of hides and their manufacture into shoes are in a delicate balance, this broker stated, with any disturbance of the regular order causing serious consequences. The leather industry further is in constant peril from the competition of leather substitutes.

Boosts Meat Prices.

Third, the packing industry in setting up the prices at which it will sell its beef takes into account the amount it will receive for hides and tallows. In normal circumstances the industry, according to this broker, is able to estimate fairly accurately what it will get for these by-products. With the piling up of huge hide surpluses suddenly the packers are forced to reduce their prices to get rid of them. Since they take in less for their hides they must ask more for their beef, the broker asserted. Here the public suffers directly.

This broker pointed out that even in normal times the packers must meet the competition of hides from almost all animals killed. The farmer who kills an animal for his own use sells the hide as does the small town butcher. Such skins are called country hides and normally sell at from a cent to a cent and a half under the hides coming out of the packing plants because they are not in as good condition as the latter.

Even in low price periods, when the farmers and small butchers get almost nothing for their work in skinning carcasses, they refuse to destroy hides, but send them on the market to get what they will bring.

Hide Production Jumps.

The normal production of western packers—the middle west plants controled by the Big Four packers—is about 100,000 hides a month, according to the broker. In the last two months this has jumped to around 150,000, it was stated.

The tanner is in the worst situation of the three industries involved because of his already large inventories which he must dispose of. The tanners are seeking to have the government find some way to hold up the hides from cattle being killed under the AAA relief program. They want the government to find some new uses for leather or they want the finished hides to be stored and released in an orderly manner.

"The situation so far as the tanning industry is concerned is extremely serious," the broker said. "Eventually the situation will be cleared, because when the present wholesale slaughtering stops there will be a limited supply. But in the meantime, unless the tanner patient is given some help, he will die."

National Life, Accident Business in Sharp Gain

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 22.—The National Life and Accident Insurance company has reported an increase of $37,611,780 in life insurance in force for the first half of 1934, against $10,392,224 in the first half of 1933, and $32,135,959 for all of 1933. The total paid for new insurance for the six months of 1934 is $102,529,752, which compares with $76,238,775 for all of 1933.

DROUTH SENDS GRAINS HIGHER; CORN BUOYANT

Killing Heat Worst in 33 Years.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The blighting drouth which fastened itself over the southwest last week, bringing damage and destruction to crops and suffering to animals and men alike, was the basis for the advance in prices which took place in grains in the market here.

Conditions prevailing in many sections of the afflicted area were described as the worst since 1901, a year of heavy crop damage, and competent observers agreed that much of the damage done to the corn crop cannot be mended regardless of weather conditions from now on.

Not only were excessively high temperatures reported over a wide area, but the killing heat has continued for an unprecedented length of time. The most reliable appraisers described the events of the week in the stricken area as calamitous. Vegetation was destroyed over large areas. Live stock had to be transported out of the worst sections in order that life might be maintained.

Fear Drouth Extension.

As the week closed fears were being expressed lest the ruin which has been visited on the corn crop in Missouri, Oklahoma, Kansas, Texas, and Nebraska, might be extended into the central west and the more important producing states. Many reports of a disturbing nature were received from points in Illinois and Iowa, but the fact remains that those states have received moisture and the crops are in better condition to withstand the heat. Cheering reports came out of Indiana, where the outlook for the crop is good and promises excellent returns in many sections.

The outlook for wheat was not materially changed by events of the week although the heat in the northwest led to many reports of further deterioration in the spring wheat crop there. In the southwest, however, the harvest was underway and prevailing weather conditions in some respects were favorable to the harvest.

DROUTH SENDS GRAIN HIGHER; CORN BUOYANT

Heat Reported Highest in 33 Years.

Quality Running High.

The quality of the grain being harvested is high and drouth effectively eliminated any danger of injuring the grain. In the northwest the deterioration in the wheat crop has already been so great that most authorities were inclined to the belief that not much more damage could be done. The government estimated a crop of only 89,400,000 bushels, based on July 1 conditions, and even if this figure turns out to be high the actual reduction in number of bushels is not expected to be great.

An actual crop 10 per cent below the figure forecast would not amount to much considering the total crop, one grain house pointed out. The country is already prepared for a short wheat crop in the neighborhood of 485,000,000 bushels and it is not believed that what happens now can change matters much.

Corn Situation Different.

The situation respecting corn is entirely different. This is the crucial month for the crop and since the government made public its surprisingly small estimate of 2,113,000,000 bushels on July 10, there has been heavy damage visited on the crop in certain sections. At the time the government report was made traders received the estimate on corn with considerable skepticism. Events of the last week have removed all doubting and the prospects are still subject to material change.

The price advance in corn last week exceeded that in wheat as might logically have been expected. September wheat closed less than 2 cents above the previous week's final quotation. September corn, on the other hand, was up 3⅝ cents a bushel. When it is considered that a bushel of corn is now worth only about two-thirds the worth of a bushel of wheat the price advance is more conspicuous when compared with that in the market leader.

December Best Gainer.

It was in the December corn contract that the widest advance was registered. Closing at 67¾ cents a bushel, this delivery was up more than 5 cents from the preceding week. This restores a more normal differential between the September and December delivery, which had been ruling abnormally small.

The strength in the corn market is perhaps more strikingly demonstrated by the manner in which the futures market absorbed the unprecedented volume of hedging growing out of the heavy purchases of cash corn by Chicago dealers. More than five and a half million bushels of the grain were purchased in the country during the week for shipment to Chicago and all of this was hedged by sales in the futures market. The selling was absorbed on a rising scale of prices.

Expect Heavy Receipts.

The coming week is expected to see heavy receipts of the grain purchased last week. The purchases were the heaviest ever witnessed at this season, which is 10 weeks in advance of the harvest season. Much of the corn came out of cribs which had been sealed under government loans. The prevailing prices enabled farmers in Illinois and nearby points to sell their corn, pay off the government and pocket a profit.

The following is the range of corn and wheat future prices for the week:

Market closed a year ago.

The week saw many gloomy reports come out of Canada on deterioration of wheat there. Competent observers made some bullish appraisals on existing conditions. Developments there will be awaited with interest. Because the fate of our own crop is pretty well fixed at this season the events in Canada are certain to have an important influence in the trend of prices in our market.

September rye staged an advance of more than 3 cents a bushel last week and closed at 74 cents, while Chicago received further receipts of foreign rye. Oats were little changed, with the September contract closing at 45½ cents. Barley was moderately higher, with the September delivery finishing up a cent at 74 cents a bushel.

Union Carbide Net Income for Quarter Shows Gain

Union Carbide and Carbon corporation had a net income, after all charges, of $4,779,505 for the quarter ended June 30. This is equal to 53.1 cents a share on 9,000,743 shares outstanding. These earnings compare with 29.36 cents a share in the second quarter of last year and 48.20 cents a share in the preceding quarter of this year.

METAL MARKET IS FEATURED BY ADVANCE IN LEAD

Buyers Stock Up to Meet Fall Requirements.

New York, July 22.—(AP)—A steadily improving price situation in lead featured nonferrous metals last week. Advances of $1 to $2 a ton in lead reflected steady day-to-day purchases, with buying on the advance approximately equaling the smelter ore intake.

The demand was predominately for August shipment, with buyers apparently anxious to stock up against anticipated fall requirements.

No change of consequence occurred in copper, with the price holding at 9 cents for Blue Eagle electrolytic. A generally smaller consumer demand was emphasized by reports that operations in mills of the Waterbury, Conn., district have shrunk preceptibly. June statistics, however, showed a reduction of 36,300 tons in domestic refined stocks, or nearly double the reduction in May. Since June 1, 1933, United States stocks of refined have been reduced 228,000 tons.

Zinc was flat, although prices held generally steady. While demand was negligible, producers are favored by the statistical position and are not disposed to press offerings. Tin continued steady in a quiet market. Foreign exchange movements affected prices from time to time, but generally the schedule was unchanged. Demand was quiet, with buyers coming in only as needs demanded. Tin plate trade sentiment improved, reflecting intimations that previous reports of large stocks in hands of can makers were exaggerated.

Use of Lake Superior Ores Lighter in June; Above '33

Lake Superior ores consumed by furnaces in June totaled 2,721,44[illegible] tons, compared with 2,957,934 in May and 1,894,004 in June, 1933. Ore on hand at furnaces and Lake Erie ports at the end of June amounted to 27,042,854 tons, compared with 27,4[illegible]9,090 tons on the same date a year ago. There were 30 furnaces in blast on June 30, a decrease of 24 from the previous month.

NEW CONFLICT ARISES TO ROIL AAA HARMONY

Policy on Food Processors Constitutes Root.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—A recurrence of the dissension which last year led to the resignation of George N. Peek as agricultural adjustment administrator has arisen within the farm administration to threaten again the smooth functioning of that agency.

The cause of the present trouble is rooted in differences of opinion as to the extent to which the AAA should go in trying to bring about reforms in practices of food processors and distributors without the aid of unmistakably clear authorizing legislation on which to proceed.

Between Tugwell and Davis.

Parties to the conflict chiefly are Undersecretary of Agriculture Tugwell and Chester C. Davis, who succeeded Mr. Peek as administrator.

But behind their differing points of view have formed small groups of subordinates which promise to become larger unless the controversy rapidly is terminated.

The conflicting views came to a head recently when Dr. Tugwell, in an address before the Iowa Bankers' association at Des Moines, accused certain large food processors with an under cover campaign "to overthrow the agricultural adjustment program at its foundation."

Sees "First Effort."

The first effort in this direction Dr. Tugwell saw in the almost unanimous opposition of processors to the proposed "clarifying" amendments to the AAA when the amendments were up for hearings before the senate agricultural committee. He said the second step would come with a concerted drive on the processing tax which, he said, already had begun with the distribution by packers of "subtle propaganda" against the hog processing tax among farmers.

Mr. Davis and those who support his views do not agree that big processors are quite so intent upon overthrowing the adjustment program and the processing tax system. He holds, rather, that, on the whole, they have been good sports about it.

Chief Antagonists.

Handlers and distributors are considered by Mr. Davis to have been the chief AAA antagonists.

Beyond this, the Davis group appears to be particularly irked by Dr. Tugwell's remarks because of their futility, in view of the present AAA policy concerning marketing agreements with processors. This policy is that all such agreements must be voluntary.

Thus, Mr. Davis, together with Howard Tolley, his right hand man, sees nothing to be gained by an antagonistic attitude toward processors.

Wesson Oil and Snowdrift.

Investors' Guide: Will you give me some information on Wesson Oil, including its sales. Am thinking of buying some.—J. S. H.

Answer: Wesson Oil and Snowdrift Company, Inc., is one of the leading factors in the cottonseed oil products industry, accounting for about one-fifth of domestic production. The major use of its output is for olive oil wholesalers, bakers, and manufacturers of mayonnaise, potato chips, and soap. Demand from these sources is relatively stable. The remainder of sales are in packages to the general public as a substitute for butter and lard. Among by-products produced are cattle feed, soap stock, pitch for making paints, linoleum and roofing, and cotton linters used in rayon.

The price of packaged goods sold to the public depends not so much on raw material costs as on prices of competing products. Major production cost is the cost of raw material.

Earnings have held up favorably during the last few years. Declining dollar sales were in large part offset by lower raw material costs. Since it is difficult to hedge the product, the company often has to take a position in the market, making the course of cottonseed oil prices an important factor in earnings. Since the latter part of 1932 the company has steadily expanded its inventory.

Net income for the 9 months to May 31 was $1,299,000, or 70 cents per common share. Sales were $25,872,000. For the corresponding period of the preceding year sales were $20,616,000 and net income was $533,000, which was only 60 per cent of preferred dividend requirements.

Year ended Aug. 31	Net sales.	Net income.	Inc. per com. share.
1933	$30,552,000	$1,616,000	$0.71
1932	30,787,000	2,112,000	1.38
1931	45,442,000	2,547,000	1.86
1930	61,324,000	3,208,000	2.79

As of May 31, 1934, current assets were more than nine times current liabilities. There was no funded debt. Capitalization consists of 295,655 shares of $4 dividend no par preferred and 584,154 shares of no par common. The common pays 12½ cents a quarter.

Lahontan Valley Sugar.

Investors' Guide: In going over some business papers I found one-half share of Lahontan Valley Sugar company stock. Are the shares worth anything?—Mrs. P. H. R.

Answer: The Delaware charter of Lahontan Valley Sugar company was proclaimed repealed for nonpayment of two years' taxes on Jan. 26, 1926. The company, therefore, no longer has a corporate existence.

We find nothing to indicate that the stock has any value.

BRAZIL BANS GOLD EXPORTS; BUYING ALL NEW METAL

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 22.—(AP)—Finding its coffers all but empty, the government has cut off gold exports, ordered all newly mined gold sold at the Banco do Brasil and authorized the mint to buy jewelry and wrought gold at the London price of approximately $1 a gram. The volcanic forces of the depression shifted $150,192,000 of the country's gold reserve abroad in 1929 and left only $203,000.

The immediate effect of the government's new regulations has been to turn a flow of the metal from illicit operators to government holdings. Another result of the new decree is the intensification of prospecting in little known fields in the states of Goyaz and Minas Geraes.

LETTERS

Letters of not more than 200 words addressed to the Financial Editor will be printed in this column from time to time.

NRA Assessment.

Chicago, July 20.—A man came to my shop today and wanted to collect $1 for belonging to the NRA code. I didn't pay him and just stood him off until next week. He said if I didn't pay it "they" would send notice to me to come to the Chicago office and take away our NRA sign. I told him to take it along. He said they would send out a deputy and cause me a lot of trouble. Do you know anything about this? We have no hired help. The dollar is for one year's dues.

Another Liquid Bank.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 20.—Prompted by your article this morning concerning the liquid position of a second Chicago bank we are enclosing a statement of the American National bank of Kalamazoo which you will note covers only eight months of operation.

We opened for business Nov. 1 last year starting from scratch. While we were organized to assist in liquidating the old Bank of Kalamazoo our bank was capitalized entirely independent from any payoff from that institution. We are the only bank outside of Detroit, started under similar circumstances, where the capital was subscribed in its entirety by individuals, with the result that when a 40 per cent release was made to depositors of the old bank, this money went to them in full without reservations for buying stock in our institution.

When we opened we had capital liabilities of $300,000 and no deposits. We believe you will agree that this growth to more than $2,600,000 in eight months is perhaps the best reflection of the return of confidence in this important Michigan community.

Until coming here a year ago I was associated with the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company of Chicago, and R. F. Fiske, our cashier, was for many years with the City National Bank and Trust company of Evanston.

DUNLAP C. CLARK, President.

Editor's Note: The statement shows cash of $904,244, government securities of $683,800, municipal and other bonds of $379,568 and commercial paper and secured loans of $537,500.

Loans and discounts are carried at $369,709 and real estate loans at $47,806. Total deposits are $2,653,171, $150,000 in preferred stock is government owned, $100,000 in common is owned individually in Kalamazoo, and surplus and undivided profits are shown at $50,782.

Attention, Grain Traders.

Fairbury, Ill., July 17.—I was very much disgusted with what Thomas Furlong said in regard to farmers selling corn. He indicated that they were not gloomy over the coming crop or they would not be selling their old corn.

Any one with only ordinary judgment ought to know that farmers as well as other business people have to have enough money to pay their honest debts and we can never tell from one hour to another what the Chicago Board of Trade will do. They are just as likely to put the price down in the face of a famine, as when there are prospects of a good crop.

When we have to deal with men who gamble with our income how is one to tell when to sell. No other business would stand for such a thing for one day. And, of course, I am sure that anything Furlong writes is in favor of the Board of Trade.

I am in favor of the farmers boycotting the Chicago Fair until the Board of Trade gives them a fair deal.

A DISGUSTED FARMER.

BUICK DOUBLES WORKING FORCE FIRST 6 MONTHS

Pay Roll Over Six Million Above 1933 Total.

Flint, Mich., July 22.—[Special.]—The sharp improvement this year in the automobile business is reflected in wage and employment figures of the Buick Motor Car company for the first six months of this year. Harlow H. Curtice, president, disclosed today that in the first six months of 1934 the company paid its employés $10,529,279 in wages and salaries, as compared with $4,192,235 in the corresponding 1933 period, while an average of 14,199 men were employed daily, compared with a daily average of 7,183 last year.

This increase in employment has contributed greatly to the recovery of Flint, one of the most important of Michigan's automobile manufacturing cities.

Mr. Curtice pointed out that employment during the first half of the year was maintained at a steady level of around 14,000, whereas a year ago it slumped as much as 2,400 in a single month. The monthly average of wages and salaries paid by the company during the period was $1,754,879, compared with $698,605 in the corresponding 1933 period.

Holds Employment Level.

"The ability of the company to maintain this steady manufacturing pace and satisfactory level of employment has been due, of course, to a considerably improved market for automobiles," Mr. Curtice explained. "Throughout the first half there has been virtually no fluctuation in employment.

"Shortly after the 1934 models were introduced last December the company swung into full production and the employment rolls rose to 12,692 in January. In the following month there were 14,936 persons employed in the Buick plants and the monthly average has been close to that figure since.

"There were no considerable layoffs during the entire six months. Minor reductions and increases were made from time to time to adjust the factories to production requirements. The largest change was an increase of approximately 2,300 in February, while the largest decrease was one of slightly over 400 in March.

New Car Expands Market.

"On May 12 we introduced a new lower priced car which expanded our market and increased volume. The result was that, where Buick's manufacturing for the year might have been reached in April or May, the company instead experienced its best production month in June, with July schedules not far behind.

"With the expanded market created by the new car there is reason to expect that Buick will equal in the second half of the year the excellent sales volume it achieved in the first six months. Should this volume be reached it will mean good employment for the remainder of the year at levels somewhat under those of the last six months."

MUNICIPAL BOND NOTES

A new issue of $2,000,000 city of St. Louis, Mo., school district 3 per cent bonds, due on Aug. 1, 1940 to 1954, will be placed on the market today by a syndicate compoesd of the Bankers Trust company, Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust company, St. Louis; Stone, Webster & Blodgett, Inc., and the Wells-Dickey company, Minneapolis. The bonds will be priced to yield 2.50 to 2.96 per cent. According to bankers the bonds are legal investment for savings banks and trust funds in New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and other states.

Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., will offer a new issue of $156,000 Stark county, O., emergency poor relief 2½ per cent bonds, due semi-annually on Sept. 1 and March 1, 1934 to 1938. The issue will be priced to yield 0.25 to 2.50 per cent. The bonds, according to the bankers, are payable from the proceeds of a selective sales tax levied by the state and are general obligations of Stark county.

GILT EDGE BONDS RISE; SECONDARY LIENS DECLINE

Many Issues Reach New High Territory.

New York, July 22.—(AP)—Prime investment loans moved in their own exclusive channels last week while most secondary issues followed stocks in a declining movement.

Although daily trading volumes were generally below normal, numerous bonds of the highest rating advanced by small fractions into new high territory for the last year or longer as idle funds continued to seek employment in the relatively safe groups.

There was some scattered profit taking in U. S. government securities early in the week, but this list quickly righted itself and some issues succeeded in establishing new 1934 tops while others hovered close to their best prices of the year.

What little inflationary psychology there was in bond trading showed signs of evaporating upon reports from Washington that the treasury was considering a large refunding operation in the fall. It was concluded, therefore, that if expensive new financing is contemplated, the administration will take no near-future steps toward drastic monetary expansion and will hold its program, at least for the time being, to easy credit motivation and large governmental public expenditures.

GERMANY SEEKS WAY TO RESTORE ARGENTINE TRADE

BUENOS AIRES, July 22.—A German commercial and financial mission has arrived from Berlin to study how Germany can regain her lost markets in the South American republics.

The mission is headed by Dr. Otto Kiep, former consul general in New York, and is composed of six experts representing three ministries as well as the Reichsbank. The members are assured a cordial official welcome, but there is considerable skepticism even in official circles regarding a successful outcome.

There has been a tremendous falling off of trade between Germany and Argentina since Germany instituted her exclusion policy. Even before the advent of the Hitler régime, virtually all of Argentina's exports to Germany, especially meats, were adversely affected by the quotas, high duties, and other restrictive measures that have since been aggravated by the Reichsbank's exchange restrictions. Argentina's imports from Germany in 1923 were valued at the equivalent of $116,000,000 and exports to Germany at $63,000,000.

Cluett-Peabody 6 Months Net Income Is $258,351

Cluett-Peabody & Co., Inc., report for the six months ended on June 30 a net income of $258,351 after depreciation, provision for taxes, expenses and other charges. This is equivalent, after preferred dividend payments, to 72 cents a share on 192,391 common shares. It compares with a net profit of $22,619 for the same period last year.

Lincoln National Life Sales 52.8% Above 1933

Sales of the Lincoln National Life Insurance company for the first half year were 52.8 per cent above the corresponding period of last year, according to A. L. Dern, vice president and manager of agencies.

NEW YORK CURB PRICES WEAKEN; VOLUME EXPANDS

New York, July 22.—(AP)—Prices moved downward on the curb exchange last week. Firmness in a number of specialties featured earlier trading. Activity broadened on the selling which attained volume on Friday and the average turnover for a full session increased to around 150,000 shares compared with 130,000 for the week previous.

Alcohols encountered active liquidation. Some of the utilities sagged sharply, particularly in the inactive list. Oils were easier, but metals were resistant.

MEN

A BUSINESS THAT WILL STAND INVESTIGATION PAID THREE MEN RECENTLY IN ONE WEEK, G. M., $124.05; F. D., $89.55; F. L., $83.45. IF YOU WERE OFFERED A CHANCE TO GO IN BUSINESS FOR YOURSELF IN WHICH THE ONLY INVESTMENT DEMANDED WAS CONSCIENTIOUS HARD WORK, FROM A MAN WHO HAS A GOOD CHARACTER AND IS RESPECTED IN THE COMMUNITY IN WHICH HE LIVES — WOULD YOU BE READY TO TAKE IT? IN ALL PROBABILITY YOU WOULD JUMP AT IT. BELIEVE IT OR NOT, WE HAVE THAT KIND OF AN OPPORTUNITY TO OFFER TO A FEW MEN MONDAY.

Many men in our international business are making a percentage of from $40 to as high as $180 a week, operating their own business—no boss—no investment [not one cent] and establishing themselves permanently in a business that is profitable NOW and offering rapid promotions to men that are scrappers and insist on the best things for their families.

This company is worth millions. All these millions were made by giving the little fellow a "break." Not so long ago they conceived the idea that many men would be successful in their own business—but handicapped by finances—were forced to remain in factories, shops, offices, banks, etc., on a small income.

Two weeks ago we engaged a man who had been working three days a week in a mill, nice personality, good appearance and a hard worker. Mr. R. B. his first two weeks earned $178.02. He has every reason to expect an income of $75 a week. We established that man in his own business, trained him at our expense, financed his accounts and we pay him weekly.

Our company manufactures and sell different patented and important, needful units—energized by electricity, including electrical hygiene units, air conditioning, electric mixers, concealed heating, etc., all individually patented and sales demanding.

We are not interested in disgrutled men, who think the world owes them a living, but we have a real opportunity for a few men who will work hard and learn. Sincere men will make big money and progress.

Our company representative, Mr. Welsh, will courteously receive all applicants Monday. Interviews will be granted only at 10:30 and 2 P. M. No mail or phone applications will be accepted. Be prompt. Suite 101, Mather Tower, 75 E. Wacker-dr.

COMMONWEALTH EDISON COMPANY,

THE OPENING OF A NEW DEPT. BY AN old established local house creates opportunities for rapid advancement to a few men over 28 years of age, who consider their future more important than immediate, large earnings, while home appliance or other direct sales experience is helpful, it is not essential, as accepted applicants will be given the utmost in training and cooperation and placed on a drawing account from the start. Apply after 9:30. Room 1502, Chicago Motor Club Bldg., 66 E. South Water-st.

John Dillinger, America's Public Enemy No. 1, Shot to Death by U. S. Agents as He Leaves North Side Theater

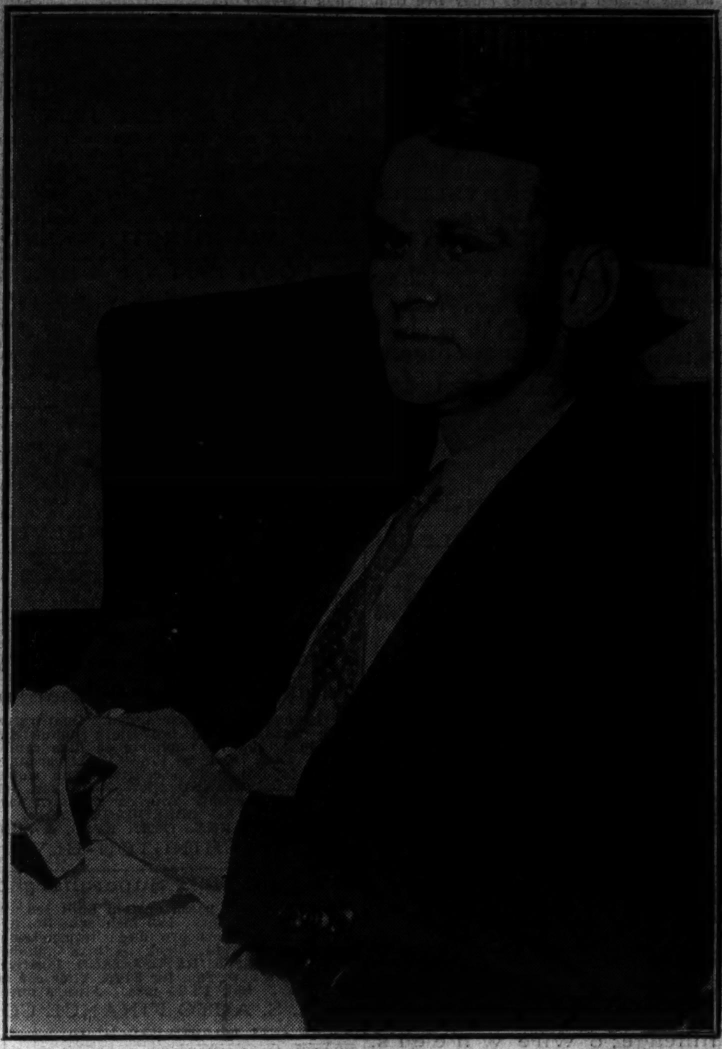
PHOTO-DIAGRAM SHOWS HOW DILLINGER, NATION'S WORST CRIMINAL, WAS SLAIN BY U. S. AGENTS IN TRAP LEAVING THEATER. (1) Dillinger leaving theater at 2433 Lincoln avenue, accompanied by two women who were following him; (2) he starts south on Lincoln avenue, the women still behind him; they pass in front of tavern; (3) in front of tea store women see officers ready to spring trap and flee; (4) agents open fire on Dillinger as he approaches alleyway and he falls mortally wounded, two bullets having penetrated his chest and another his neck.



[TRIBUNE Photo.]

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

FROM THE SCENE. Hat of Dillinger, showing bullet hole, his spectacles and cigar of gangster.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

DESPERADO'S LONG TRAIL OF CRIME COMES TO END IN CHICAGO MORGUE. The body of John Dillinger as it lay in the morgue early today after identification had been made positive despite the fact that he had blurred his finger tips with acid. Dr. Charles D. Parker is in center background.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

NORTH SIDE THRONGS FLOCK TO SCENE OF JOHN DILLINGER'S SLAYING. Crowds which increased momentarily last night when news spread of the dangerous outlaw's slaying by federal agents shown as they milled about the scene of the desperado's last stand. Spots on pavement indicate place where body fell after shooting.
